

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

IN my edition of the First and Second Books of the Histories I followed the text of Baiter and Orelli, as revised by Meiser. In consequence of the delay in the continuation of that revision, I have now, in editing the later books, adopted (and retain in the second edition) Halm's text.

I have again to acknowledge my debt to the commentary of Heräus, and also to that of E. Wolff.

INTRODUCTION.

THE first two books of the Histories relate the events of the eight months between December (68) and July (69). The opening days of the year 69 had seen Galba's fall : Otho, his successor, had reigned but three months when he determined not to survive the defeat of his troops by the northern army of Vitellius : and the summer found Vitellius in Rome and Vespasian already proclaimed Emperor in the east. That victorious general would apparently have accepted the rule of Galba : but he would not serve an Otho, much less a Vitellius. Counsellor and aided by Mucianus, the governor of Syria, he resolved to assert his claims to the purple, and to maintain them in Italy by force of arms. The later books of the Histories are the story of the establishment of the Flavian dynasty : they describe two and touch upon the third of the three great wars which ushered in that dynasty—the war in Italy, the war in the North, and the war in the East.

It was not the armies of the East that were to decide the contest in Italy. Although Vespasian ha sent on Mucianus with an advanced guard towards Italy, intending himself to follow later, other swords were already drawn for him. The legions of Moesia and Pannonia—roughly speaking, the whole force of the provinces extending from the head of the Adriatic to the Black Sea—were ripe for revolt. Many of the men were old soldiers of Otho's, and were eager to be revenged on the Vitellian victors of Bedriacum: others had special reasons for following Vespasian. The flame was fanned by the three brave and capable leaders who are the heroes of the Italian campaign—Cornelius Fuscus, Arrius Varus, and Antonius Primus: and the opening of the third book finds the vanguard of the Flavian army at Poetovio—Petau in Styria—near the western boundary of Pannonia, preparing to cross the mountains into the plains of northern Italy. Here the campaign was really finished by the battle and sack of Cremona in October, 69. Vitellius' last hopes were shattered by the perfidy or death of his principal lieutenants, and the defection of the force which he had sent to encounter the enemy in the Apennines. The taking and burning of the capital by his followers only served to incense his enemies: and though a terrible battle was fought in the streets of Rome, the resistance of the garrison was but the last effort of despair. The emperor himself was put to death on December 20.

Meanwhile war had broken out on the northern frontier of the empire. The boundary between Roman and independent Germany, as far north at least as the divergence of the Rhine and Waal, was in fact, though not, properly speaking, in theory, the Rhine itself. The Roman province of Germany lay between Gaul and the great river. But it has been well said that the history of Roman Germany is the history of its military occupation: the upper and lower 'provinces' were really nothing but a chain of posts for the protection of the frontier. The upper or southern military district extended to a point some distance to the north of Mogontiacum (Mainz), and there and at Vindonissa or Windisch in the Swiss canton of Aargau troops were regularly stationed. The northern or lower province was garrisoned by forces at Bonna, Novaesium, and Vetera (Bonn, Neuss, Wesel): lower down, the Batavians and Frisians, living in the Rhine delta and on the N.E. bank of the river, were intrusted with the protection of their own territory. It appears that the naturally high spirit of the Batavians—that spirit which had made their soldiers the élite of the Roman armies—had been roused by extortion or injustice on the part of the imperial administrators. Civilis, a Batavian noble, the leader of the insurrectionary movement, had his own wrongs to resent. As moreover, a corps of 8,000 of their countrymen happened to be at the time near Mogontiacum, it was not unnatural that the Netherlanders should choose the autumn or late summer of 69 for the general uprising which Tacitus describes at the beginning of the fourth book.

The Romans were taken by surprise. Their legions—six in all on the Rhine, from Mainz to Wesel—were weak and scattered : and, what was most fatal of all, as Civilis at first acted professedly in the interest of Vespasian, their forces were constantly paralysed by mutual distrust and suspicion between officers and men : for an inexplicable fidelity kept the men generally loyal to Vitellius, whereas the officers, who had more to gain from a change of régime, were usually disposed to side with Vespasian. The generals had to fear the insubordination of their own men more than the attacks of Civilis. Nothing else was to be expected than what actually occurred. The war was a series of doubtful engagements—mutinies and murders were succeeded by moments of remorse, and these again by fresh mutiny—until by the spring of 70 four legions had joined the insurrectionary force, and two had been annihilated. Civilis was master of the field. But he had not been without allies : recent disturbances in Gaul had left that country ripe for any change : and some of the north-eastern Gauls, besides at first a few of the central communities, openly raised the standard of insurrection and proclaimed the ‘imperium Gallicarum.’ How impractical was the project of such a disruption of the empire is sufficiently shown by the fact that the saner Gauls recognised its impossibility even at the moment when Civilis and his allies were most triumphant. When Cerialis arrived from Rome at the seat of war in the spring of 70, the Treveri and Lingones were the first to encounter him and the first to yield : and a battle at the ‘colonia Treverorum’ (Trier) ended the Gallic empire. Civilis was left alone to cope with the forces of Rome. For a time he did so not without success: but as the war dragged on the contest grew daily more hopeless for the Batavians: and when their leader saw that the disunion of his associates was likely to sacrifice him alone to the vengeance of the emperor, he adopted the prudent course of making his peace while there was yet time. The last words of the fifth book are a part of the colloquy between the revolted Batavian and the Roman general.

With the materials at our command it is impossible to explain to ourselves the object of Civilis in undertaking this war. The whole matter is as obscure as the story of Vindex and the Gallic rising in the autumn of 68. It is scarcely probable that Civilis with his knowledge of Rome can have really entertained the ambitions of an Arminius: to cut the Batavians altogether adrift from Rome must have seemed to him impossible. Altogether too little is known of his character and his intentions to justify Motley's comparison of him to a later Batavian hero, William the Silent. That he was a good soldier and a skilful negotiator may be inferred from the story of the war: as to what end he proposed to himself we must be content to remain uncertain.

But whether or not Civilis' own position was that of the patriot and liberator of his country, there is no doubt that his following was far different from that of Arminius. The Cheruscan was a leader of men who were fighting to save their homes from the foreign invader. Civilis must have relied for his main support on the Batavian auxiliaries who fortunately for him were in the vicinity at the outbreak of the war: and probably these men were ready to follow any leader—a countryman of their own, for choice—who would give them enough fighting. They fought with that savage instinct which had for long made them as valuable to the Romans in war as they were dangerous in peace: it will be remembered that their actual dismissal from Italy was due to their quarrels with some of the legionaries there quartered. The transrhene Germans who allied themselves with Civilis were simply fighting for plunder. But the Batavian's best weapon of all was the weakness and disunion of his enemies. The legions of the Rhine were but skeleton battalions or manned with raw recruits. Civil war had for the nonce annihilated the tradition of discipline: and in legions such as these its place was not supplied by that esprit de corps which made the war in Italy a war of battalion against battalion (Professor Mommsen calls it a 'Corpskrieg'), and which animated the army of Cremona to hurl itself ungeneralled and unled on the advancing legions of Antonius Primus. The soldiers on the Rhine were as insubordinate as their comrades of the south: but they were worse fighters, and in the crisis they forgot their pride in the Roman name. Had Civilis been confronted in the early autumn of 69 by such troops as those which were afterwards sent against him, Tacitus might have dismissed the Batavian revolt in half a dozen chapters.

The fifth book opens with Tacitus' preface to the story of the war in the East—a brief sketch of Jewish history since the Maccabean period, a general description of Palestine, and a curious medley of traditions respecting the origin of the ‘Chosen People.’ The war itself, previous to the siege of Jerusalem, is scarcely touched, as indeed its main incidents are outside the period of which the historian is writing. Although he has no sympathy with Judaism, and regards the Jew simply as a strange and unpleasing phenomenon, yet even a Roman must have recognized that the contest was unlike any of the wars which had built up the empire. The enemies were no mere savages like the Germans, or civilized nations whose day was over, like the Greeks: for the first time Rome had to encounter a strong and virile people and a fully developed national spirit. Other nations might accept Roman customs and allow themselves to be gradually permeated by Roman ideas: but the national as well as the religious feeling of the Jew made him at once an irreconcilable and a formidable antagonist. It is no wonder that Tacitus should have done scant justice to the Hebrew’s long struggle to preserve his nationality against Seleucid and Roman: but we, with a fuller knowledge of Jewish tradition and a better understanding of Judaism, may well regard the page that records the last desperate resistance to an alien domination as one of the most tragic in history.

 legione orto, repositis Vitellii imaginibus
 vincla Caecinae iniciunt; Fabium Fabullum quintae 5 legionis legatum et Cassium Longum praefectum castrorum duces deligunt; forte oblatos trium Liburni carum milites, ignaros et insontes, trucidant; relictis castris abrupto ponte Hostiliam rursus, inde Cremonam pergunt, ut legionibus primae Italicae et unietvicensi
 10 simae Rapaci iungerentur, quas Caecina ad obtinen-

XV. Ubi haec comperta Antonio, discordes animis, 15 discretos viribus hostium exercitus adgredi statuit, antequam ducibus auctoritas, militi obsequium et iunctis legionibus fiducia rediret. namnec militiae ignarus. simul ingens Germanorum vis per Raetiam timebatur. ex Britannia Galliaque et Hispania auxilia Vitellius acciverat, in- 10 mensam belli molem, ni Antonius id ipsum mentuens festinato proelio victoriam praecepisset. universo cum exercitu secundis a Verona castris Bedriacum venit.

 postero die legionibus ad muniendum retentis, auxili-ares cohortes in Cremonensem agrum missae, ut 15 specie parandarum copiarum civili praeda milites inbuerentur: ipse cum quattuor milibus equitum ad octavum a Bedriaco progressus, quo licentius popula-

XVI. Quinta ferme hora diei erat, cum citus eques 16

15 occurreret. pavidus interim Varus turbae suorum miscetur intulitque formidinem. pulsi cum sauciis integri suomet ipsi metu et angustiis viarum conflictabantur.

17 XVII. Nullum in illa trepidatione Antonius constantis ducis aut fortis militis officium omisit. occursare paventibus, retinere cedentes, ubi plurimus labor, unde aliqua spes, consilio manu voce insignis
5 hosti, conspicuus suis. eo postremo ardoris provectus est, ut vexillarium fugientem hasta transverberaret; mox raptum vexillum in hostem vertit. quo pudore haud plures quam centum equites restitere; iuvat locus, artiore illic via et fracto interfluentis rivi ponte,
10 qui incerto alveo et praecipitibus ripis fugam impediabat. ea necessitas seu fortuna lapsas iam partes restituit. firmati inter se densis ordinibus excipiunt Vitellianos temere effusos, atque illi consternantur. Antonius instare percussis, sternere obvios, simul
15 ceteri, ut cuique ingenium, spoliare, capere, arma equosque abripere. et exciti prospero clamore, qui modo per agros fuga palabantur, victoriae se miscebant.

18 XVIII. Ad quartum a Cremona lapidem fulsere legionum signa Rapacis atque Italicae, laeto inter initia equitum suorum proelio illuc usque provecta. sed ubi fortuna contra fuit, non laxare ordines, non 5 recipere turbatos, non obviam ire ultroque adgredi hostem tantum per spatium cursu et pugnando fessum. forte ducti haud perinde rebus prosperis ducem desideraverant atque in adversis deesse intellegebant. nutantem aciem victor equitatus incursat; et Vip-stanus Messalla tribunus cum Moesicis auxiliariis 10 adsequitur, quos multi e legionariis quamquam raptim ductos aequabant: ita mixtus pedes equesque rupere legionum agmen. et propinqua Cremonensium moenia quanto plus spei ad effugium, minorem ad resistendum animum dabant. nec Antonius ultra institit, memor 15 laboris ac vulnerum, quibus tam anceps proelii fortuna, quamvis prospero fine, equites equosque adflictaerat.

XIX. Inumbrante vespera universum Flaviani 19
 exercitus robur advenit. utque cumulos super et recentia caede vestigia incessere, *Eagerness of the Flavian troops to

 ac ne vox cuiusquam audiatur, quatiunt arma, rupturi 15

XX. Tum Antonius inserens se manipulis, ubi 20 adspectu et auctoritate silentium fecerat, non se decus neque pretium eripere tam bene meritis adfirmabat, sed divisa inter exercitum ducesque munia: militibus

At Vitellianus exercitus, cui adquiescere 22 Cremonae et reciperatis cibo somnoque viribus confectum algore atque inedia Battle before the walls. hostem postera die profligare ac proruere ratio fuit, indigus rectoris, inops consilii, tertia ferme noctis 5 hora paratis iam dispositisque Flavianis inpingitur. ordinem agminis disiecti per iram ac tenebras adseverare non ausim, quamquam alii tradiderint quartam Macedonicam dextrum suorum cornu, quintam et quintam decumam cum vexillis nonae 10 secundaeque et vicensimae Britannicarum legionum mediam aciem, sextadecumanos duoetvicensimanosque et primanos laevum cornu complesse. 23 XXIII. Sustinuit labentem aciem Antonius accitis praetorianis. qui ubi excepere pugnam, pellunt hostem, dein pelluntur. namque Vitelliani tormenta in aggerem viae contulerant, ut tela vacuo atque aperto 15 equorum virorumque umbrae, et falso, ut in corpora, ictu tela hostium citra cadebant : Vitelliani adverso lumine conlucentes velut ex occulto iaculantibus incauti offerebantur.

24 XXIV. Igitur Antonius, ubi noscere suos noscique poterat, alios pudore et probris, multos laude et hortatu, omnes spe promissisque accendens, cur resumpsissent arma, Pannonicas legiones interrogabat :
5 illos esse campos, in quibus abolere labem prioris ignominiae, ubi recipere gloriam possent. tum ad Moesicos conversus principes auctoresque belli ciebat : frustra minis et verbis provocatos Vitellianos, si manus eorum oculosque non tolerent. haec, ut quosque

30 XXX. Ac rursus nova laborum facies: ardua urbis moenia, saxae turres, ferrati portarum obices, vibrans tela miles, frequens obstrictusque Vitellianis partibus Cremonensis populus, magna pars Italiae stato in eosdem dies mercatu congregata, quod defensoribus auxilium ob multitudinem, obpugnantibus incitamentum ob praedam erat. rapi ignes Antonius inferrique amoenissimis extra urbem aedificiis iubet, si damno rerum suarum Cremonenses ad mutandam

31 XXXI. Iam legiones in testudinem glomerabantur, et alii tela saxaque incutiebant, cum languescere paulatim Vitellianorum animi. ut quis ordine anteibat, cedere fortunae, ne Cremona quoque excisa obstitit Antonius datisque defensoribus ad Vespasi-

15 nihil aequae ac libertatem hausit, civis, senator, maritus, gener, amicus, cunctis vitae officiis aequabilis, opum contemptor, recti pervicax, constans adversus metus.

6 VI. Erant quibus adpetentior famae videretur, quando etiam sapientibus cupido gloriae novissima exiit. ruina socieri in exilium pulsus, ut Galbae natus rediit, Marcellum Eprium, delatorem accusare adgreditur. ea ultio, incertum maior an iustior, senatum in studia diduxerat: nam si caderet Marcellus, agmen reorum sternebatur, primo minax certamen et egregiis utriusque orationibus testatum; mox dubia voluntate Galbae, multis senatorum deprecantibus, omisit Priscus, variis, ut sunt hominum ingenia, sermonibus moderationem laudantium aut constantiam requirentium.

Ceterum eo senatus die, quo de imperio Vespasiani censebant, placuerat mitti ad principem legatos. hinc inter Helvidium et Eprium acre iurgium: Priscus eligi nominatim a magistratibus iuratis, Marcellus urnam postulabat, quae consulis designati sententia fuerat.

VII. Sed Marcelli studium proprius rubor excitabat, ne aliis electis posthabitus crederetur. paulatimque per altercationem ad continuas et infestas orationes provecti sunt, quaerente Helvidio, quid ita Marcellus iudicium magistratuum pavesceret: esse illi pecuniam et eloquentiam, quis multos anteiret, ni memoria flagitiorum urgueretur. sorte et urna mores non discerni: suffragia et existimationem senatus reperta, ut in cuiusque vitam famamque penetrarent. pertinere ad utilitatem rei publicae, pertinere ad Vespasiani honorem, occurrere illi, quos innocentissimos senatus habeat, qui honestis sermonibus aures imperatoris inbuant. fuisse Vespasiano amicitiam cum Thrasea, Sorano, Sentio; quorum accusatores etiam si puniri non oporteat, ostentari non debere. hoc senatus iudicio velut admoneri principem, quos probet, quos re-

15 cur antiquitus instituta exolescerent aut principis honor in cuiusquam contumeliam verteretur ; sufficere omnes obsequio. id magis vitandum, ne pervicacia quorundam irritaretur animus novo principatu suspensus et vultus quoque ac sermones omnium circum-

15 saevitiam Neronis per eius modi imagines inluisse, nec minus sibi anxiam talem amicitiam quam aliis exilium. denique constantia fortitudine Catonibus et Brutis aequaretur Helvidius : se unum esse ex illo senatu, qui simul servierit. suadere etiam Prisco, ne
20 supra principem scanderet, ne Vespasianum senem triumphalem, iuvenum liberorum patrem, praeceptis coerceret. quo modo pessimis imperatoribus sine fine dominationem, ita quamvis egregiis modum libertatis placere. haec magnis utrimque contentionibus iactata 25 diversis studiis accipiebantur. vicit pars, quae sortiri legatos malebat, etiam mediis patrum adnitentibus retinere morem ; et splendidissimus quisque eodem inclinabat metu invidiae, si ipsi eligerentur.

IX. Secutum aliud certamen. praetores aerarii 9 paupertatem questi modum impensis postulaverant.

eam curam consul designatus ob magnitudinem oneris et remedii difficultatem principi reservabat : Helvidius 5 arbitrio senatus agendum censuit. cum perrogarent sententias consules, Volcatius Tertullinus tribunus plebis intercessit, ne quid super tanta re principe absente statueretur. censuerat Helvidius, ut Capitolium publice restitueretur, adiuuaret Vespasianus. eam 10 sententiam modestissimus quisque silentio, deinde oblivio transmisit : fuere qui et meminissent.

X. Tum investus est Musonius Rufus in P. Celerem, 10 a quo Baream Soranum falso testimonio circumventum

Galba absolutus sub Vitellio rursus discrimen adiit, 5 flagitante supplicium eius exercitu : inde causae irarum spesque ex malis nostris. sed Civilis ultra quam barbaris solitum ingenio sollers et Sertorium se aut Annibalem ferens simili oris dehonestamento, ne ut hosti obviam iretur si a populo Romano palam 10 descivisset, Vespasiani amicitiam studiumque partium praetendit, missis sane ad eum Primi Antonii litteris, quibus avertere accita a Vitellio auxilia et tumultus Germanici specie retentare legiones iuebatur. eadem Hordeonius Flaccus praesens monuerat, inclinato in 15 Vespasianum animo et rei publicae cura, cui excidium adventabat, si redintegratum bellum et tot armatorum milia Italiam inrupissent.

NOTES.

(M = Codex Medicus.)

LIBER III.

I.

Date : towards the end of 69 A.D. (probably October).

2. Postovionem : Petau, in Styria, on the Drave.

3. tertiæ decumæ : this legion, originally one of Otho's, had been employed in public works after the battle of Bedriacum (ii. 67), then sent into winter-quarters in Pannonia, ii. 86.

4. Pannoniæ Alpes, sc. the passes over the Julian and Carnic Alps. Al. Pannonicas.

8. Germanicarum legionum, the main strength of Vitellius' army at Bedriacum, i. 61, ii. 57.

9. advenisse mox : the British troops (8000 vexillarii, ii. 57, 100), had arrived at Rome soon after Vitellius. Heräus reads modo : others adventura mox.

10. 1. pulsarum nuper legionum : the only legions present of those which had supplied detachments to the army at Bedriacum were the xiii. Gemina, vii. Galbiana, xi. Claudia.

14. superesse Vespasiano, sc. after Mucianus, governor of Syria, and the legions had left him for Italy. Muc. was now on his way across from Byzantium, ii. 83.

14. classes : there were stations off the Syrian and Egyptian coasts ; also we hear of a classis e Ponto, ii. 83.

II.

1. Antonius Primus : v. note on ii. 86.

2. concitator : M has conciator : Orelli reads concitor.

5. procinctu, 'readiness for battle.'

7. antea egerint. M has ante se egerint. But Tac. does not elsewhere use se agere; Seneca does once. Cp. i. 9, innocentius egerunt.

9. valetudinibus: cp. A. vi. 50, valetudines principis.

11. meditatione belli, 'preparation for war.' Cp. iv. 26, meditamenta belli. freto, only a strait.

14. ultro: v. note on i. 7.

15. duas classes, at Misenum and Ravenna. Neither had as yet joined Vespasian.

Illyricum mare: the Vitellians could cross the Adriatic, get round the mountains, and attack the base of Antonius' communications.

19. deceptae: v. the description of the battle of Bedriacum, ii. 42.

* 20. Moesici: ii. 32, 44; integras means that they had not yet fought.

24. quamquam, with an adjective or participle, like καίπερ, is commonly found in Tac., but only once in Cicero. Cp. i. 83, quamquam turbidis rebus.

25. disiectam Vit. aciem: ii. 41.

29. auctor consilii ero, sc. I will put the plan in operation. Some read actor, which makes good sense, but has no MSS. authority.

30. in integro: sc. who have not committed yourselves as I have, and may still make your peace with Vitellius.

32. impulsas Vit. res, 'that I have shaken the power of Vitellius.'

III.

4. vulgus et ceteri: et is explanatory: cp. the same expression i. 25, and 5 plebem et vim equitum.

7. epistulis: ii. 82. A single letter is meant; for the pl., cp. i. 67.

9, 10. descendisse in causam: on the analogy of descendere in forum, in campum, etc. So descendere ad accusandum and similar phrases are found constantly in Cicero.

10. gravior is the MS. reading, but in the sense 'had more weight with' would naturally be followed by some word like auctor; hence Orelli reads gratior.

IV.

1, 3. Fuscus and Flavianus : ii. 86. procurator, the finance officer : v. note on i. 2.

5. cunctantior : cunctatior, M ; cunctator, Heräus.

6. tamquam : v. on i. 8.

8. quaesisse credebatur : cp. 11, Saturninus scripsisse credebatur.

10. legati : a legatus pro praetore with consular rank, governor of an imperial province.

11. impulerat : the infin. after impellere is a poetical construction. Cp. Aen. ii. 55, impulerat ferro Argolicas foedare latebras.

12. non quia ... egebat : Cicero would say egeret.

13, 4. cum maxime, 'at that moment' : v. i. 29.

V.

1. transmittere bellum : cp. ii. 17. Bellum is not in M.

2. inpune ... foret : the adverb is used as a predicate ; cp. frustra esse.

2, 3. Apon. Saturninus, governor of Moesia ; i. 79, ii. 96.

5. Sarmatarum Iazugum, said to have been settled between Danube and Theiss. The Iazyges are of course a subdivision of the Sarmatae.

8. remissum. Cp. A. i. 8, remisit Caesar (sc. declined the offer) adroganti moderatione.

8, 9. externa molirentur probably means 'should involve us in a foreign war.' Orelli interprets it somewhat differently : ne assuefierent ... πολυπραγμονεῖν in rebus ad suam civitatem nihil pertinentibus.

9. ex diverso = ex hoste. Cp. ii. 75, paratum ex diverso praemium.

10. Sido atque Italicus. Sido was nephew of Vannius, a prince established by Tiberius, A.D. 19, on the left bank of the Danube, between the Marus and the Cusus. Sido and his brother expelled Vannius and divided his kingdom. A. xii. 29, 30. Italicus may perhaps have been a nephew of Sido ; he is not to be confused with the Cheruscan of the same name, mentioned A. xi. 16.

12. fidei quam iussorum patientior: sc. they were loyal but would not brook command. M has fidei commissior patientior; hence Orelli reads fidei commissae patientior.

14. procurator: v. i. 2. Certain of the small imperial provinces (e.g. Judaea) were administered by the imperial finance agent.

15. Sext. Felix: iv. 70.

15. Auriana, proved by a military 'diploma' to be identical with ala prima Hispanorum; according to Heräus it was in Raetia, A.D. 107.

17. Aeni, the Inn; roughly, between E. Switzerland and Tyrol.

19. alibi: sc. in Italy.

VI.

Antonius advances on the roads through Opitergium, Patavium, and Ateste; thence he makes an isolated attack on a body of Vitellians at Forum Allieni. After this he continues his march on the main road to Verona, which becomes his headquarters. Caecina with the main body of Vitellius' army is at Hostilia till ch. 14.

1. vexillarios: v. i. 31.

3. Varus: A. xiii. 9. He served under Corbulo against the Parthians.

7. primum pilum; rank of senior centurion (commander of the first centuria) in a legion or praetorian cohort.

8. in perniciem vertere: iv. 11. 68. Perhaps Varus may have been disgraced through the influence of Domitian's wife, Domitia, a daughter of Corbulo.

12. classis Rav. conatus: M has simply classis Ravennatis; hence Orelli, classem Ravennatem.

15. Sebosianae, called after Sebosus who raised the corps; cp. ala Auriana: in Britain temp. Trajan.

16. ponte iuncto: Forum Alieni is Legnago on the Adige.

VII.

1. principia belli: sc. the Flavians scored the first success. The phrase is on the analogy of litem dare secundum aliquem; cp. A. iv. 43, ita secundum Messenios datum. Heräus reads vulgata victoria legiones, etc., and makes principia—data, the last sentence of ch. 6. M has duae, not data.

3. legato, legionis.

6. adductus = severius. He was too much of a martinet for a civil war.

8. interpretatione gloriaeque, 'from the interpretation which their desire for glory (desire to obtain credit for their own side) put upon it.' Gloria is used here (as often in Cicero) in the sense of gloriae cupido; cp. A. i. 8, iactantia gloriae ad posteros.

10. recoli = recolendi causa reponi.

VIII.

1. sedes, 'base of operations.'

quaesitum, 'discussed.'

bello. Cic. would say belli; cp. i. 67, initium bello; i. 22, Othoni comes.

5. in rem famamque, 'profitable and creditable.' Cp. A. iv. 33, in rem fuerit.

8. reputantibus: the dative is equivalent to cum reputarent. Cp. the use of the same word ii. 50.

9. pretium: sc. they were a valuable prize.

10. interiectus = obvius, 'barring the way.'

11. pervium. Cp. Liv. xxx. 10.

illa = illac. Raetiam: M praetiam: perhaps p comes from pretium in l. 9.

Iulias Alpes: not only the Brenner Pass, but the more eastern passes leading towards Venice from the valley of the Upper Drave.

13. ignara, 'unknown,' so Sallust and Virgil; cp. A. xi. 32.

15. claustra annonae: Alexandria was the 'key of the Roman market.'

16. provinciarum: Asia, Syria, Egypt.

19. sine luctu victoriam: Tac. often uses adverbial phrases for attributive adjectives (sine sacris hereditas is good Republican Latin, but the practice is more common in the silver age): cp. e.g. iv. 8, sine fine dominatio = an endless tyranny; and 5, impune foret.

IX.

3. Hostilium (Ostiglia), S.E. of Mantua, on the right bank of the Po.

4. Tartari: connected with the Po on the right and the Adige on the left by canals called the fossae Philistinae.

7. duae legiones: vii. Galbiana, xiii. Gemina.

10. conscivissent: cp. Livy xxxiii. 48, fugam conscisse, but earlier writers generally use sibi or some other dative of person after it.

11. tempora, καρποί: so 40, agendi tempora.

15. tribunus: the legatus Tettius Julianus having fled, ii. 85. Vipstanus Messalla is several times mentioned as one of the historians of the period; 25, 28.

16. et qui: Tacitus always uses the subjunctive where a relative clause as here is co-ordinated with an attributive adjective or participle; v. i. 10, note.

17. artes bonas, generally 'good qualities,' as here: cp. 86, iv. 1. In i. 17 bonae artes = 'honourable means.'

21. vulgari, 'merely formal,' 'unemphatic.' Cf. Cic. ad Fam. i. 3, commendatio non vulgaris, 'a special recommendation.'

27. de exitu: Halm's correction: although de exercitu, the reading of M, might very well stand, as it answers Caecina's praise of the German legions.

ut inimici praesumpere: sc. they ventured even now (prae-) to express hostility to Vitellius. The qualifying inimici in a manner supplies the want of an object after praesumpere; naturally some word such as probra would follow.

29, 30. pro contione: discipline must indeed have been relaxed when generals had thus to take the men into their confidence; cp. iv. 24, where letters are similarly read.

X.

The Flavian army consists of five legions:—vii. Galbiana, xiii. Gemina, vii. Claudiana, iii. viii.; the Vitellian, of eight; xxi. Rapax, and i. Italica, at Cremona; i. Germanica, iv., v., xv., xvi., xxii., with  vexillarii  of ii., ix., xx., as yet at Hostilia.

5. cesserat, 'had fallen.' adversa: sc. facing the enemy.

9, 10. turbine quodam, 'a wild impulse.'

10. propinquam Vit.; cp. 4.

11. interceptorem ... clamitabant: it is the tendency of Latin to incorporate the words of an exclamation in the construction of the sentence. Cp. Ov. Met. 3. 244, Actaeona clamant; Cic. Phil. 2. 28, Ciceronem exclamavit, 'he called out "Cicero."''

13. plerumque, 'often': cp. 85.

19. mulcendique: que, not et, because the two principal things are facundia and auctoritas. Artes is only an explanatory adjunct to facundia.

20. ubi crudescere: ubi is only used with the historic infinitive in Tacitus, when also combined, as here, with a finite verb. Cp. A. ii. 4, ubi minitari Artabanus et ... bellum adversus Parthos sumendum erat.

21. manus, 'actual violence.' Cp. A. xiv. 62, nec manu aut telo opus.

22. ludibrium, 'the comedy': cp. the same device, i. 45.

sensit ludibrium: 'saw that they were being trifled with.'

27. ciens=appellans: cp. 24, principes auctoresque belli ciebat.

28. signa et bellorum deos. On the shafts of the standards were medallions bearing heads of various deities; A. ii. 17, propria legionum numina.

30. fatisceret, 'wore itself out.' For the subj. v. note on 27.

33. litteris: sc. Flavianus was summoned to Vespasian's headquarters.

XI.

1. tabe: cp. i. 26, infecit ea tabes legionum mentes.

4. medio diei: cp. ii. 53, medio temporis; A. ii. 21, sero diei.

6. procacitatis et petulantiae: the same qualities are joined in 32. Perhaps 'ribald insolence' will translate the two substantives.

10. velut: Cicero would say velut si.

11. gaudebant, with infinitive: a poetical construction.

11, 2. in quibus devertebatur = in quibus devetriculum habebat: generally deverti is followed by in with accusative.

17. digressu: for the abl. cp. 10, adventu.

19. fuit, ἐγέvero, 'came into his hands.'

XII.

The narrative is taken up at the point where it was dropped at the end of Book II.

8. in principia: v. note on i. 48, ii. 93.

10. trierarchi, in the Roman fleet captains of the larger; navarchi, captains of the smaller vessels.

11. paucis resistentium: v. note on pauci militarium virorum, 73.

16. Atriam, on the Tartarus, between the mouths of the Po and Adige. Pliny says that the Adriatic sea was called after it.

18. Caesaris liberti: v. l. 56, note. For the sentiment of is quoque, cp. l. 76. Neronis libertus (nam et hi malis temporibus partem se reipublicae faciunt).

XIII.

1, 2. primores centurionum, sc. centuriones primorum ordinum, the ten senior centurions among the twenty of the first rank; cp. ii. 89. There were 60 centurions in the legion, 20 in each line.

3. munia, the word always elsewhere used by Tac. to express 'duties.' M has munera. Cp. 20, 59.

3. secretum castrorum adfectans-(secretorum M). Heräus interprets 'desiring to seize a moment when the camp was empty'; and compares i. 10 in secretum Asiae sepositus. Orelli, 'intending to hold a secret council of war.' The first rendering seems best. Why not read secretum adfectans, castrorum in principia?

6. in arto commeatum, 'the cramped state of his communications'; more especially food supplies; cp. A. iv. 32, nobis in arto et inglorius labor.

7. in deterius: ταπεινὸν τὰ Οὐρελλίου πράγματα, Josephus, i. 4; cp. 38, cetera in maius.

12. in fama, 'reported.' According to Hegesippus, iv. 30, the soldiers did not mutiny till next day.

13. praescriptum : ii. 85  vexillis nomen Vitelli praeferentibus.

14, 15. vastum silentium, 'dreary silence,' cp. A. iii. 4, dies ... per silentium vastus.

15. cuncta simul erumpunt : Orelli makes erumpunt transitive, the subject being milites. Cp. Cic. ad Att. xvi. 3, ne in me stomachum erumpant (vent their anger).

18. ex diverso, 'opposed to them'; cp. 5.

19, 20. primanos quartadecumanosque : i. Adjutrix in Spain (ii. 43, 67) xiv. in Britain (ii. 43, 66).

21. ut tot armatorum : M ut armatorum. According to the punctuation in the text, this is a separate exclamation; cp. Cic. Cat. i. 22, tu ut unquam te corrigas. Orelli regards it as a final sentence depending on the preceding: 'they had routed their enemies, only to be handed over,' etc.

22. exuli Antonio : ii. 86.

23. unius classis accessionem fore, 'would follow in the wake of a single fleet.' Notice the feeling of legionaries towards classarii. Additamentum is used in the Pro Sestio (67) in the same rather contemptuous sense as accessio.

25. etiam auferre militem : etiam militibus principem M; before which Heräus inserts militem principi.

27. repositibus, etc.: sc. demanding of them how they had used their victory (at Bedriacum) and what misfortune had compelled them to change sides (Orelli). Heräus thinks that repose. prospera means that they would be asked to show how they had bettered themselves by changing sides; but this sense can hardly be got out of the Latin.

---

XIV.

8. abrupto ponte : over the Tartarus, apparently.

11. praemisera : ii. 100.

XV.

1. Antonio, dative: cp. 12, Vespasiano tenebantur, and note on i. ii.

8. Germanorum, sc. German auxiliaries : 8.

11. belli molem : cp. i. 61. M has luem, retained by Orelli, which would mean 'a force disastrously great.' Cp. A. ii. 47.

13. secundis...castris, 'in two days' march': cp. iv. 71, and Caes. B. G. 7, 36. The distance was about 35 miles.

Bedriacum : v. note on ii. 23.

17. imbuerentur, 'might accustom themselves to': cp. 49 ut licentia militem imbueret.

17, 18. ad octavum, sc. lapidem : eight miles from Bedriacum on the via Postumia, so about twelve from Cremona.

19. cursabant : M has curabant, which might stand, as the word is often used absolutely.

XVI.

1. Quinta hora : about 11 A.M.

3, 4. quidnam agendum : on the omission of esset v. on i. 21.

7. nam refers to modica.

versa fortuna, 'the tables were turned.'

8. citissimus : Orelli retains ultimus, the reading of M; this can only mean (for Heräus' rendering per ultima campi fugiebat can hardly stand) that those who had been foremost in pursuit now found themselves last in flight; a scarcely necessary touch, although it puts the picture more vividly before us. velocissimus (VELOCIMVS, by the omission of the middle of the word, frequent in M) might be easily corrupted into VLTIMVS (VLOCIMVS).

9. sponte Antonii : a construction frequent in Tac. ; cp. iv. 19, sponte legatorum. Varro de lingua Latina, vi. 7, 71.

acciderunt : M has the pluperfect, which does not make sense.

11. medio : cp. i. 68, medio vagi.

18. conflictabantur, 'were embarrassed by': cp. 32, where it means 'were at the mercy of.'

XVII.

2. fortis : M has fortissimi, perhaps from dittography of the first syllable of militis.

4. manu voce: cp. A. ii. 17. Manu in 29 means 'by waving his hand,' here, by his deeds.

6. vexillarius is here 'a standard bearer,' as i. 41. On the common meaning of the word (a man serving in a detachment away from his legion), v. i. 31.

7. quo pudore = cuius rei pudore: cp. ii. 43. Livy, xxi. 5, quo metu.

9. interfluentis rivi, 'a stream that barred their way': cp. 8, interjectus. The stream may perhaps have been the Delmona, a tributary of the Oglio.

10. incerto, 'unsafe': cp. A. i. 70, where it is opposed to solidus.

13. atque illi consternantur, 'at once they were thrown into confusion.'

16. prospero clamore, 'shouts of triumph.'

XVIII.

1. fulsere ... signa: sc. the Flavians saw the gleaming standards.

2. legionum: for plural, cp. i. 18, note.

laeto, 'successful': v. i. 27, note.

4. contra fuit: cp. 5, impune foret.

6. tantum per spatium, eight miles (ch. 15), Bedriacum being twenty miles from Cremona.

9. incursat, followed by the accusative as in iv. 6, incursare Canninefates; A. xi. 18, inc. Germaniam. Livy uses it in the same way.

11. multi e legionariis. Dübner's correction of the ms. militiæ legionariis.

14. minorem ad resistendum animum, 'less stomach for fighting.' On the omission of tanto, v. i. 14, note.

---

XIX.

3. recentia caede vestigia: cp. Virg. A. ix. 455, recentem caede locum; a similar use is 77, recens victoria miles. It means 'the fresh marks of slaughter.'

6. in medio, 'openly.'

7. plano: al. in plano, which is certainly more in accordance with Latin usage; but the simple ablative of place is not uncommon in Tacitus, e.g. 48, eodem latere sitam.

8. idem audaciae: cp. A. xiii. 16, idem aetatis.

10. clementiam = famam clementiae.

12. sinu: on its metaphorical use, v. ii. 92, note.

15. ne cuiusquam according to Madvig's rule for quisquam is more general and emphatic than ne cuius, 'no one whoever' (Madv. Lat. Gr. 494).

15, 16. rupturi ni ducantur: cp. 56, si consulerentur vera dicitur. A conditional clause depending on a future participle is hardly found before Livy.

XX.

7. pro virili portione: Cicero and Livy would say pro virili parte.

11. ignotae situm urbis = ignotum situm urbis: the same phrase, Livy 5, 39. On situs in the sense of 'plan,' v. i. 48, note.

16. vineis: cp. ii. 21, note.

expugnandis: for the dative of purpose, cp. cetera usui (below) and 70, inritandis hominum oculis.

21. pluteis cratibusve, v. ii. 21, note.

23. quin, 'why not?'

25, 26. lixas calonesque, v. ii. 87, note.

XXI.

4, 5. sex...egerat, v. 14. Besides the six complete legions there were detachments from three other legions, and a force of cavalry. These troops cannot have come by the direct route (via Postumia) or the Flavians would have already encountered them. It is suggested that they marched by the via Aemilia (by Mutina and Parma). The route must have been circuitous if, being in haste (so much so as to march 30 miles in one day), they yet were four days on their way: as a comparison of dates shows that they must have been.

7. obstructas mentes, on the analogy of obstructae aures.

8. sistere = consistere : Tac. often prefers simple to compound verbs. Cp. i. 35, sistens (= resistens) according to one reading.

9. aggere ; v. note on the battle described ii. 24. Otho's army is there formed across a road, as the Flavians are here.

12. limitem, according to Orelli a footway parallel to the main road or agger (cp. 25 limes viae). Heräus and Wolff with more probability make it a path at right angles to the road.

15. praetor. vexillum : who had been disbanded by Vitellius and re-enlisted under Vespasian, ii. 67.

16. equite : instrumental. Cavalry on the wings, as usual.

17. Sido atque Italicus : 5.

XXII.

3. alгоре : it was near the end of October.

4. ratio fuit, 'their plan should have been' : cp. Cic. in Verr. Act. I., minari divisoribus ratio non fuit.

5. indigus rectoris : Valens had not yet come and Caecina was under arrest.

7. per iram ac tenebras : like the hackneyed instance 'in tears and a sedan chair.' Wolff compares Lenau's in Dämm'rung und Gedanken. i. 63, cum magistratibus et precibus.

9. suorum, if genuine, appears to be superfluous ; at best it can only serve to emphasize the fact that Tac. is speaking of the Vitellian, not the Flavian army ; thus grammatically it will refer to quartam Macedonicam.

16, 17. his, rursus illis = modo his, modo illis : cp. 82, hos, rursus illos.

21. septima legio, posted patenti campo, would naturally have the hardest fighting. a Galba conscripta, i. 6.

22, 23. sex prim. ord. centuriones, thus a fifth of the centurions of highest rank ; v. 13, note.

24. aquilam : since the time of Marius the eagle was committed to the charge of the senior centurion in the legion (primipilus), though actually carried by the aquilifer.

XXIII.

2. excepere pugnam 'took their turn at fighting.'

7. ballista. On the Roman military engines v. Dict. of Antiq. Tormentum. Ballistae threw stones (varying in weight from two pounds to half a hundredweight), catapultae shot darts. Josephus (Bell. Jud. iii. 7) says that the Romans had a ballista which would throw stones to the distance of a quarter of a mile.

10. vincla ac libramenta (hendiadys) 'suspending chains.'

11. intercidit; cp. Liv. 2, 8, memoria intercidit.

9. arreptis...scutis. The soldiers were probably praetorians, and so their armour would make them more easily recognized, hence the disguise.

13. adulta nocte, cp. A. i. 23, aestate adulta; Thuc. 2, 19, ροῦ θέρους ἀκμάζοντος.

luna. Dio 65, 11, says the moon became αἰματώδης καὶ μέλαινα. There was a similar effect in a battle between Pompeius and Mithridates (Plut. Pomp. 32).

ostenderet falleretque, 'threw a deceptive light on.'

15. falso, ut in corpora, ictu: sc. the ill-aimed missiles, directed against the shadows instead of the actual bodies, fell short. Cp. ii. 22, certo ictu.

18. incauti offerebantur, 'were an easy mark.'

XXIV.

2. pudore = verbis pudorem facientibus.

4. Pannonicas: xiii. and vii. Galbiana.

5. prioris ignominiae, sc. their defeat in the first battle of Bedriacum.

7. principes auctoresque belli: ii. 85. Cp. Liv. xl. 50, principes et auctores transcendendi Alpes. Caes. B. G. v. 52, principes belli inferendi.

ciebat = exciebat; cp. 10, nomine ciens.

10. accedere, several times with the accusative in Tac. e.g. A. ii. 58: also in Varro, Nepos, Sallust.

11. Parthos...pepulissent, in 36 B.C.: Antonius is appealing to the traditions of the legion, not individual memory.

12. Armenios, A. xv. 26.

Sarmatas, i. 79.

infensus, 'in harsher language.'

13. pagani, properly 'villagers': it is a sharper taunt than Caesar's well-known Quirites (to his mutinous soldiers).

14, 15. illic signa armaque: according to ii. 57 the Praetorians had given up their weapons to their officers.

16. ignominiam consumpsistis; 'you have drunk the cup of shame to the dregs.' Cf. Sil. Ital. xi. 34, consumptus pudor.

17. solem: cp. Herodian iv. 15, ἀσπασόμενοι τὸν ἥλιον ὡς ἔθος αὐτοῖς (of the Parthians when beginning a battle). The 3rd legion had served under Corbulo in Syria.

XXV.

1. inde, from the fact of their saluting the sun.

an: v. i. 7, note.

2. in vicem = inter se; v. i. 74, note.

5, 6. impetus vel pavor, etc. sc. impetus contraheret vel pavor diduceret. Logical arrangement is sacrificed to the balance of the sentence. There is the same mode of expression in ii. 41: in primam postremamve aciem prorumpebant aut relabebantur.

6. impulsos. M has pulsos, which does not give the sense of 'shaken' or 'wavering.' The last letter of postquam may have caused the confusion.

9. limitem viae, here the footpath parallel to the agger viae.

13. additus, instead of the technical word ascriptus or in legionem conscriptus. Tac. avoids technical terms where he can.

18. voce flebili: for the active flebilis cp. penetrabile frigus, Virg. Georg. i. 93. So in English, 'a lamentable voice.'

precabatur placatos: sc. ut placarentur. There is the same proleptic use in Virg. Georg. iv. 547, placatam Eurydicen vitula venerabere caesa. For the next words cp. Liv. iii. 50, neu se ut parricidam liberorum aversarentur.

20. publicum, sc. done in the public service: 'ne sibi potius imputent hoc facinus quam universis civilibus armis.' (Ernest. ap. Orell.)

24. miraculum, 'astonishment,' as in i. 27.

XXVI.

2. Othoniano bello, in April, 69 : v. Book II.

4. auxerat, heightened by towers : 29.

7. nullo iuxta subsidio : cp. 31, nulla ultra venia.

9. victoria ad inritum revolvebatur, 'they were like to lose the fruits of their victory.'

11. molientes : moliri always conveys the idea of effort or difficulty : v. ii. 35, note.

16. pensabantur, instead of the common compound compensare.

XXVII.

7, 8. proxima Bedriacensi viae : the combination of a neuter plural adjective with a dative or ablative, or a prepositional phrase, is not common : cp. Liv. xxi. 11, per patentia ruinis.

12. et alii, instead of alii ... alii. Cp. A. i. 63, ut opus et alii proelium inciperent.

14. artes, 'tactics.'

pondera saxorum, 'weighty stones.' Cp. A. i. 17, uligines paludum.

15. testudinem : cp. Liv. xlv. 9, and Lucan iii. 474, ut tamen hostiles densa testudine muros | tecta subit virtus armisque innexa priores | arma ferunt, galeamque extensus protegit umbo.

16, 17. donec ... prosternerent : cp. 23 donec ... ostenderet. Donec in the sense of 'till at last' is used by Cicero with the indicative only : by Tac. sometimes with the indicative, but generally with the subjunctive.

18. incesserat : v. ii. 63, note. For the indicative cp. Agr. 37, coeperant ... nō opposuisset.

19. Cremonam monstrassent, sc. promised them the plunder of Cremona.

XXVIII.

1. Hormine : cp. 12.

ingenium, 'device.' Cp. iv. 32, where ingenia = 'caprice,' and Plin. Pan. 49, exquisita ingenia coenarum.

2. Plinius: the elder Pliny, an older contemporary of Tacitus, left twenty books, bellorum Germaniae, and also thirty-one books entitled a fine Aufidii Bassi (i.e. a continuation of Bassus' history). He is referred to as an authority for the period, A. xiii. 20; xv. 53.

3. haud facile discreverim: the perfect subjunctive used potentially in a negative sentence is common in Tacitus. Cp. 22, adseverare non ansim; A. v. 6, haud discreverim. It is also occasionally used in affirmative sentences, as ii. 76, propius fuerit.

nisi quod, 'I will only say that,' etc.

4. quamvis pessimo. Cicero prefers to use the positive with quamvis.

10. omni imagine mortium. Cp. Aen. ii. 369, plurima mortis imago; Thuc. iii. 81, πάσα ἰδέα θανάτου.

XXIX.

3. obstinatos inter se, 'stubbornly vying with each other.' For the participle, cp. 17, firmati inter se.

4. superiacta: M has superiecta; but there seems to be best authority for the a.

6, 7. quos inciderat. Cp. Aen. ix. 721, bellatorque animos deus incidit; Appul. Met. ii. 13, fortunam... incidi.

8. iuncta, sc. built on the rampart.

9. cuneis = cuneatim: cp. v. 16. Cuneus is properly a wedge-shaped column (Veget. iii. 19), but is often used for any kind of columnar formation.

XXX.

1. nova laborum facies. Cp. Aen. vi. 103, non ulla laborum, o virgo, nova mi facies inopinave surgit.

4. stato, 'regularly recurring': cp. stata sacrificia, etc.

8. amoenissimis: a word usually employed in describing natural scenery.

10, 11. altitudinem... egressa: for the accusative, cp. A. ii. 38, egredi relationem.

XXXI.

2. cum languescere. Livy and Sallust, as well as Tacitus, often use cum with the historic infinitive.

4. cedere fortunae, 'yield to their position' or 'to necessity.'

10. primores castrorum: sc. the tribunes, centurions, and decuriones.

10, 11. nomen atque imagines: these would be on the vexilla, and apparently also on shields. Cp. Suet. Vesp. 6, nomen eius vexillis inscripserunt; Dio Cassius, L. 5, speaks of Roman soldiers bearing Cleopatra's name inscribed on their shields; and cp. Quintilian, pro milite, 12, inscriptum in scuto Marii nomen.

15. extremum malorum: for the accusative in apposition to the sentence, v. i. 44, note: but extremum may possibly be a nominative.

17. pro muris, 'out on the walls': cp. i. 29.

24. victoriae temperassent, 'had not abused their victory': ii. 45.

27. adeo invisa scelera sunt refers of course only to perfidia. So hateful is crime that they reproached him even with that treachery which had served their own interests.

XXXII.

2. confictabatur: cp. 16.

5. in neutrum, sc. neither for nor against it.

8. credebantur: cp. 4.

9. amphitheatrum: ii. 67.

11. invidiam, 'bad feeling.'

15. ditem alioqui = already rich enough.

19. excepta vox est, etc. The vox is the utterance of the slave, not (as some think) of Antonius. The general complains that the water is not hot enough; the slave replies, 'it will be hot directly.' Some one, hearing the words, interprets them as if Antonius had asked the slave if Cremona was already burning, and the reply had been 'it will be on fire immediately.'

20. vernile = servi; cp. ii. 59, vernilibus = coarse, fit for slaves.

XXXIII.

2. lixarum: on their usual character, v. ii. 87, procacissimis etiam inter servos lixarum ingeniis.

3. in libidinem ... corruptior: in expresses the aim or result. Cp. A. xv. 44, tamquam in sacvitiam unius absumerentur (to gratify one man's cruelty).

7, 8. ubi incidisset, for the subjunctive cp. i. 49, ubi in bonos incidisset, and note on si mali forent, in the same chapter.

7. aut quis = aut aliquis: as if the pronoun were immediately preceded by ubi.

10, gravia auro ... dona: cp. Virgil's dona dehinc auro gravia.

13, 14. faces in manibus: Heräus and Wolff put only a comma at erueret, and explain faces in manibus as meaning faces manibus gerentes, which seems intolerably harsh, and is supported by no really similar instance.

16. utque exercitu: on ut, v. i. 4 note. 'Exercitu' is an ablative of attendant circumstances, a sort of abl. absolute; cp. ii. 73, ut nullo aemulo.

19, 20. in ignem considerent: cp. Aen. ii. 624, ix. 144.

20. Mefitis, dea avertens molestiam odoris gravissimi, putoris, qui ex corruptione aeris nascitur (Orelli); properly the corruptio aeris or malaria itself; a deity whom the inhabitants of the banks of the Padus would find it only too necessary to propitiate. An inscription dedicating an altar to Mefitis has been found at Cremona.

For the common Italian deification of harmful agencies, cp. e.g. the invocation of Mildew or Blight in the Fasti of Ovid (iv. 911), Aspera Robigo parcas Cerealibus herbis, etc.

[Josephus (Bell. Jul. iv. 11.) gives a very different account of the battle and taking of Cremona. According to him the Vitellians did not surrender; Antonius surrounded most of the army and cut it to pieces, pursuing the remainder into the town. 4500 Flavians and 30,200 Vitellians fell (Josephus always deals in large numbers). It is needless to say that Tacitus is the more trustworthy authority on Italian history.]

XXXIV.

2. primordio sui, instead of prim. suo: cp. A. ii. 54, nostri origine. In older authors the genitive of personal pronouns is usually objective, after a substantive of action; e.g. accusator mei = qui me accusat.

On the foundation of Cremona v. Liv. xxi. 25.

6. rueret, a stronger word than irrueret or ingrueret.

4. ingruente in, 'threatening.'

7. opportunitate fluminum, 'the convenient vicinity of its rivers' (Po, Adda, Oglio).

ubere agri: cp. Aen. iii. 164, potens armis, atque ubere glebae.

8. adnexu conubiisque gentium, 'connection and inter-marriage with the surrounding population.' It is not necessary to suppose (with Heraeus) that adnexu is deliberately substituted for commerciis, though the right of trading would doubtless be included among other forms of connexion.

9. civilibus infelix: Cremona had sided with Brutus and Cassius, and had therefore been deprived of much of its territory by the triumviri. Cp. Ecl. ix. 28, Mantua vae miserae nimium vicina Cremonae.

13. occidi coepere: cp. i. 16, eligi coepimus, instead of the passive form, which earlier authors generally prefer to use with the passive infinitive.

16. municipum: townsmen of other places probably besides Cremona itself. Under the empire Italian towns are generally called municipia whether really so, or coloniae; on the distinction under the Republic, v. Watson's ed. of Cicero's Letters, Appendix xii. Cremona was itself a colonia properly speaking.

XXXV.

1. sepultae urbis. Cp. Cic. ad. Fam. iv. 5, cadavera urbium.

6. ambigue agerent, 'waver in their allegiance.'

Illyricum: i. 2, note.

9. Alpinus Montanus: v. iv. 31.

10. uterque ... fuerant: cp. ii. 97, uterque ambigu.

11. ostentui, 'as visible signs' (of their victory).

12. suspecta ... tamquam: v. i. 7, note.

XXXVI.

The story returns to Vitellius : cp. ii. 101.

3. curis luxum obtendebat, forgot anxieties in luxury. There is a different construction in 56 : nube diem obtenderent.

5. in ore vulgi agere, a phrase used several times by Tac., and by Cicero (in Verrem., i. 46) ; cp. also pro Plancio, 27, habitavi in oculis.

6. quibus si, etc. = quae, si cibum iis, etc. Cp. Cic. R. P. i. 4, is enim fueram, qui quum liceret (sc. cui quum mihi liceret) maiores ex otio fructus capere quam ceteris, non dubitaverim, etc.

9. Aricino. The grove of Diana Aricina, at Aricia, on the Appian way, sixteen miles from Rome. The town was the first stage of Horace's journey to Brundisium. Sat. i. 5, egressum magna me excepit Aricia Roma | hospitio modico.

10. perculit : as we should say 'he received the startling news that,' etc.

15. pietatem, 'loyalty.'

16. Sabinum : ii. 92. Varus, ii. 29 (there praefectus castrorum).

XXXVII.

1, 2. composita in magnificentiam oratione, 'a laboured and high-flown oration.'

3. atrocis ... sententiae, 'a vote of censure.'

4. L. Vitellius, brother of the emperor.

12. suspensi et vitabundi : sc. their doubt and fear led them to avoid direct mention of Vespasian. Cp. the account of the Senate in a similar difficulty, i. 85.

13. unum consulatus diem : cp. i. 77 (note) for the number of consuls in this year and their periods of office.

16, 17. eiuravit magistratum, sc. abdicated his office. Magistrates took a solemn oath on the last day of their tenure that they had done nothing illegal.

16. adnotabant periti, 'it was remarked by men of knowledge.' The same expression A. xii. 25.

17. abrogato magistratu neque lege lata: I do not know however what abrogatio there could be without a lex, unless we suppose it effected by a senatus consultum. There seems to have been an instance of this in the last century of the Republic, Cinna being deprived of his consulship by the authority of the Senate (Vell. ii. 20); but Plutarch says that he disregarded the abrogatio as illegal. Cp. iv. 47, abrogati legem ferente Domitiano consulatus.

18. suffectum, elected to fill a vacancy caused by any premature deprivation, properly; under the Empire, the consuls for the first division or nundinum of the year are ordinarii, the rest suffecti.

nam: sc. it was only the illegality, not the fact, which was remarked, for the thing itself had occurred before. In 45 B.C. Caninius Rebilus was consul for the afternoon and evening of Dec. 31. Cicero makes jokes about him in a letter (ad Fam. vii. 30): ita Caninio consule scito neminem prandisse... fuit mirifica vigilantia, qui suo toto consulatu somnum non viderit.

XXXVIII.

1. I. Blaesi: Vitellius' host in Gaul, ii. 59, i. 59. Orelli says he is the Blaesus filius of A. iii. 74; if that is so he must have been an old man by this time, as the date of the events there described is about A.D. 20.

3. Servilianis hortis, near the Tiber, between Rome and Ostia. v. A. xv. 55. Suet. Nero, 47.

5. Caec. Tuscum, banished by Nero in 67, but recalled after his death. Cp. Suet. Nero, 35, Tuscum nutricis filium relegavit, quod in procuratore Aegypti balineis in adventum suum exstructis lavisset.

7. cetera in maius: sc. an exaggerated account was given of the rest. Heräus says that cetera is for ceterum (moreover). According to him it is used in this way seven times in Tac.

11, 12. principum offensas, etc., sc. keep a watchful eye on whatever may offend the emperor. Vitellius was subitis offensis mutabilis, ii. 92.

17. confusionis, 'emotion.

18. sui anxium: the same expression, A. ii. 75.

23. Iunios: thus Blaesus would belong to the same gens as M. Junius Brutus, the republican. Apparently he was descended from Augustus' sister Octavia, at one time married to the triumvir Antonius.

24. imperatoria: his father (v. sup.) having been saluted imperator by the legions for his victory over the African Tacfarinas. A. iii. 74.

26. amicorum inimicorumque neglegens, 'caring not who was friend or foe.'

25, 26. dum ... fovet. The subordinate clause is independent of the oratio obliqua, as is often the case in Tacitus, more especially with clauses introduced by dum.

30. si quid fato accidat, i.e. in case of death by disease; on the other hand, a violent death is praeter fatum (cp. the Homeric ὐπὲρ μόρον): Cic. Phil. i. 4.

XXXIX.

3. veneno. Perhaps Suetonius refers to this when he says (Vit. 14) that Vitellius killed etiam unum veneno manu sua porrecto in aquae frigidae potione.

4. notabili: al. nobili.

6. pavisse oculos. Suetonius tells this story, but of another occasion; l. c.

8. elegantiam morum. Cicero uses the word also in a moral as well as an aesthetic sense: pro Sulla, 28, vos qui cum summa elegantia atque integritate vixistis.

10. partium, sc. the disaffected party: partes by itself generally has this meaning.

12. adeo non = nedum: v. i. 9, note.

13. parum, etc.; he could not escape the crime of being thought worthy to rule.

XL.

11. perrumpere, sc. through the country about Ravenna.

14. dum media sequitur: dum here as often indicates an action which brings about some result not contemplated by the agent; cp. e.g. i. 82, vulnerato tribuno et praefecto legionis dum ruentibus obsistunt.

15. providit, used absolutely, 'was cautious.' Cp. Cicero, ad Fam. ix. 18, actum est de te nisi provides.

XLI.

2. tres cohortes : if these are all praetoriae as Heräus says, it is strange that in ch. 55 Vitellius can still send fourteen (the total number being sixteen) to hold the Apennines ; thirteen surrender, one having apparently returned to Rome, as we find afterwards three besieging the Flavians in the Capitol.

3. fallere, used absolutely ; cp. fefellere, ii. 98.

7. aderant, 'ministered to his passions.'

ruentis fortunae, etc. : sc. the fact that this was the last indulgence which his falling fortunes allowed him. For the thought, cp. ii. 47, difficilius est temperare felicitati qua te non putes diu usurum.

13. pavidos. M has avidos, which gives only the very strained sense, 'they were so eager for danger that they were ready to change sides at their own risk.'

14. eo metu, etc. In M metu is followed by et paucis ... comitantibus ; the transposition in the text, giving a slightly better sense, is authorized by the Codex Budensis. In any case the pauci are Valens' personal retinue.

16. flexit : from the via Flaminia which led to Ariminum.

18. ignavum, an epithet applied to things as well as persons : cp. i. 62, ignava pax.

si provenisset, 'in the event of success.' Cp. Suet. Vesp. 5, quicquid cogitaret...id esse proventurum.

19. atrox, 'alarming' to the enemy : cp. i. 51, atroces nuntii.

XLII.

3. Liburnicis : ii. 16, note.

4, 5. Picenus ager, to the south of Umbria.

7. segnitia maris : malacia appears to be the technical term. depellitur is logically connected only with adversante vento.

8. portum Herculis Monoeci : Monaco. The accusative is used by itself, on the analogy of the omission of ad before names of towns.

9. agebat=erat, versabatur : cp. 34, trans Padum agentes.

Marius Maturus...procurator, an imperial agent administering the small Caesarian province of the Alpes maritimae ; ii. 12.

XLIII.

2. Valerius Paulinus had served in the Jewish war: later he is spoken of praefectus Aegypti.

1. procurator of Gallia Narbonensis, probably.

3. ante fortunam, 'before his elevation': cp. i. x., post fortunam.

4. exauctorati, 'discharged'; ii. 67.

4, 5. bellum ... sumebant; on the analogy of arma sumere: cp. v. 25.

5. Foroiuliensem coloniam, Fréjus, more commonly called Forum Iulii or Forum Iulium: cp. A. ii. 63.

claustra, 'the key.'

9. favore municipali, 'out of friendship for their fellow-townsmen.'

11. varios, 'wavering.'

12. speculatoribus: cp. i. 24, note.

13. totidem; it is not clear whether this means three or seven.

15. volentibus fuit, like the Greek βουλομένοις ἦν. Cp. A. i. 59, ut quibusque bellum invitis aut cupientibus erat. Sallust (Iug. 84) and Livy (xxi. 50) also use this construction.

18. Stoechadas (Στοίχαδας), so-called because lying in a row: now the 'Îles d'Hyères.' There are three of them. The ancient names were Prote, Mese, and Hypaea.

19. defertur; Orelli reads adfertur.

20. oppressere, 'overtook.' The word is often used as here in the sense of coming suddenly upon or taking by surprise: cp. 68, repentina vis Caesarem oppressit. For Valens' death, v. 62.

XLIV.

2. Adiutrice, prima classicorum. It had been sent to Spain by Vitellius; ii. 67.

5. inclinatus. M has inditus; hence others read insitus.

7. praepositus et bello clarus is the ms. reading. But the co-ordination of praepositus and clarus is extremely harsh, and Heräus therefore reads, praepositus et pace et bello clarus, egerat is used absolutely (= erat) as in 42: for the addition of an adjective, cp. A. i. 68, haud minus iniquis Germanus agebat.

6. a Claudio : in 43 A.D., under the command of Plautius Silvanus, Agr. 13.

7. non sine motu ... ceterarum, 'not without some resistance on the part of the rest,' the XX Valeria and IX Hispanica. The twentieth legion especially was unwilling to join Vespasian ; Agr. 7 (Mucianus) Agricolam vicesimae legioni tarde ad sacramentum transgressae praeposuit.

XLV.

For the events here briefly alluded to, cp. A. xii. 31, and following chapters.

3, 4. propriis in ... reginam stimulis : sc. he had a quarrel of his own with her.

5. Brigantibus : north of a line drawn from the Humber to the Solway.

7. instruxisse triumphum, 'paved the way for his triumph.' This, however, must not be taken literally. Claudius' British triumph was celebrated in 44; while Caratacus was taken prisoner and brought to Rome with his family in 51. Hence Cartismandua rather completed Claudius' victory than prepared the way for his actual triumph.

17. tamen refers to variis proeliis; although the contest was long doubtful, yet they did save her at last.

18. bellum nobis relictum : to be finished in 71 by Petilius Cerialis.

XLVI.

2. externa vi : because the Batavi and Treveri (hence perfidia socialis) were joined by Germans living east of the Rhine.

5. memorabimus : in Books IV. and V.

Dacorum, in Roumania, opposite to the Roman province of Moesia (corresponding to Servia and Bulgaria).

7. prima rerum : cp. A. iv. 40, praecipua rerum.

8. in vicem = inter se : they heard that the empire was turned into a battle-field.

10. Danuvii : the form always used by Tacitus. Other authors call at least the lower stream 'Ister.'

12, 13. parabant, nisi... opposuisset: cp. iv. 36, eadem parabantur, nisi... evasisset.

12. Mucianus: he had left Byzantium, and was advancing westwards by land, cp. ii. 83.

sextam, called Ferrata. There was another sixth legion (Gallica Victrix), now in Spain.

17, 18. transegimus, 'settled the business,' 'made an end.' Cp. A. xii. 19, bellorum egregios fines quotiens ignoscendo transigatur.

18. F. Agrippa fell in battle against the Sarmatae; Jos. Bell. Jud. iv. 7.

Asia: a senatorial province, governed by a proconsul.

22. pars consilii pacisque, 'a wise and pacific policy.' Cp. iv. 86, pars obsequii; ii. 47, pars ignaviae. In this sense of rôle, Cicero prefers to use the plural, partes.

XLVII.

2. mancipium, a contemptuous word for a freedman: cp. ii. 57.

2, 3. regiae quondam classis: perhaps quondam is closely connected with regiae; the fleet, once the king's, but now no longer so, since the annexation of Polemo's kingdom to the empire in 63 A.D. Cp. Suet. Nero, 18.

3, 4. Polemonis. Polemo II., the last king of Pontus Polemoniacus, west of Trebizond.

5. verterat = redactum erat.

8. temnendae; the simple verb is rare in prose; cp. Virg. Aen. xi. 737, pars belli haud temnenda.

Trapezunte. Trebizond, founded in 756 B.C. by settlers from Sinope (itself a Milesian colony).

9, 10. Ponticae orae, the frontier of the kingdom of Pontus.

10. subitus, used adverbially in the same way as occultus and tacitus often are.

cohors, perhaps a cohors civium Romanorum, as Heräus says; on these bodies, v. i. 64, note. In the present instance, the cohort was the royal bodyguard. For auxilium, cp. ii. 14, vetus loci auxilium. Notice the change from apposition to a principal sentence in auxilium olim: mox, etc.

13. retinebant properly goes only with desidium licentiamque.

classi, such part of it as Mucianus had left. M has classis. Meiser conjectured classis quoque faciem intulit.

14. vacuo, cp. ii. 14, note.

eludens, 'moving unchecked': cp. Cic. Cat. i. 1, quamdiu etiam furor iste tuus eludet?

18. camaras; the word properly means 'arched roofs.' These boats were something like the popular representation of the Ark.

artis, 'low.' pari utrimque prora: cp. description of ships, A. ii. 6; διπρώροι. Strabo ii. says they held about 25 men each.

23. indiscretum et innoxium, 'at will and with equal safety.'

XLVIII.

1. ut, after advertit animum, 'and caused him to,' etc.

3. spectatae. One would expect spectatum. The epithet is transferred from the man himself to that in which he has been tested.

6. Chobi. This river, the modern Khopi (called Cobus by Pliny), rises in the Caucasus and flows into the eastern end of the Euxine.

6, 7. Sedochozorum; otherwise mentioned only by Pomponius Mela (1.19).

8, 9. minis armisque, hendiadys; 'threats of war.'

14. fluentibus. For this use of the word cp. Cic. de Off. i. 90, in rebus prosperis et ad voluptatem nostram fluentibus. Vespasian was everywhere successful beyond his hopes.

13. super M; Heräus reads supra.

16, 17. urbem Italiamque, a common combination, which makes better sense than urbem quoque, which some read after the ms. urbemque.

17. externae opis indigam. Egypt and the province of Africa were the granaries of Rome. Augustus put Egypt on a different footing from other provinces, recognizing its importance in this respect; A. ii. 59. Cp. A. xii. 43, Africam potius et Aegyptum exercemus, navibusque et casibus vita populi Romani permissa est. H. i. 79 (Calvia) transgressa in Africam ad instigandum in arma Clodium Macrum, famem populo Romano haud obscure molita.

18. eodem latere, in the same quarter of the globe, as we say. The local ablative is without a preposition, as often in Tac.

namque refers to externae opis indigam.

19. annonae subsidia, 'granaries': cp. Liv. xxvii. 6.

XLIX.

1. dum hac, etc., 'while these convulsions accompanied the transfer of empire.' Cp. Plin. Paneg. 5, nutatio reipublicae.

3. post Cremonam, 'after the episode of Cremona': most writers would say post excissam Cremonam.

4. ex facili = facilia; a Graecism: cp. i. 57, praesentia ex affluenti, and Thuc. i. 34, ἐκ τοῦ ἐπθέρους.

9. ordines 'commissions'; i.e., he allowed the legions to name their centurion (who were in general apparently appointed by the commanding officer). Cp. i. 52, redditi plerisque ordines; and i. 31, note.

10. delecti; on the plural, v. i. 35, note.

12, 13. corrumpendae disciplinae; v. ii. 100, note.

13. in praedam vertebat, made money out of it, perhaps by using his influence with the army to secure the election of would-be centurions.

14. exitiosius; cp. iv. 11. Antonius lost his influence, but does not seem to have actually suffered in any way; the court poet Martial eulogizes him in the reign of Domitian; v. ii. 86, note.

L.

5. profligato, 'nearly finished'; v. ii. 4, note.

6. undecuma legio, old soldiers of Otho's, and sent back by Vitellius to Dalmatia; ii. 11, 67.

8. Dalmatarum, inhabitants of the seaboard west of the modern Herzegovina and Montenegro.

9. P. Silvanus, governor of Dalmatia; ii. 86.
 10. vis consiliorum, 'real deciding power.'
 11. dies rerum, 'time for action'; cp. 40, agendi tempora.
 14. legionariam, service in the legions being honoratior:
 i. 87.
 16, 17. Fanum Fortunae; Fano, between Ariminum and Ancona.
 17. summa rerum, 'general plan of campaign'; cp. ii. 81.
 21. clavarium, lit. 'nail-money' (for shoes): cp. the calcearium of Suet. Vesp. 8.
 donativi nomen est; very likely a gloss.
 22, 23. festinatio atque aviditas, etc. The general sense is that individuals got plunder, but this prevented the army as a whole from obtaining its supplies.

 LL

1. Celeberrimos; cp. Agric. 1, celeberrimus quisque ingenio. Cicero does not use the word in this sense.
 2. adversus, 'with respect to.' Cp. A. xi. 17, beneficentia adversus supplices. ius hominum, 'morality.'
 6. ratio belli, 'the nature of the war': civil war relaxing the reins of discipline, as Tacitus says elsewhere.
 6, 7. distulerant: the pluperfect, because the event narrated is a digression from the course of the story to what had previously happened.
 10. apud Ianiculum: in the civil contests of 87 B.C., when the Ianiculum was besieged by Marius and Cinna; the story is told in Liv. Epit. 79. Granius Licinianus and Valerius Maximus relate the incident, but make the slain man a soldier, not of Cinna, but Sertorius.
 Horrors like these are rather to the taste of Roman historians in general, especially the picturesque writers of the early empire.
 11. Pompeianus, a soldier of Pompeius Strabo.
 12. Sisenna: praetor 78 B.C., and killed in the pirate war under Pompeius (Magnus), 67. He composed a history of his own time.
 15. petita: Heräus puts a full stop after this word
 16. haud absurde, 'not without fitness.'

LII.

3. clementius, i.e. where the ascent was gentlest, least steep. Cp. Germ. 1, clementer edito iugo. Antonius of course expected that the Vitellians would have occupied the ordinary route (the via Flaminia).

5, 6. necterent moras: the same phrase, iv. 68. Cp. Aen. iv. 51, causas innecte morandi.

6. nimius, 'too powerful for them.'

10. media, 'ambiguously.'

13. adversa abnueret, etc.; 'refuse responsibility for failure or take credit for success.'

14. P. Griphum: mentioned again, iv. 39 (as praetor). It is not clear what legion he now commanded: Heräus says the seventh; but there seems to be very little evidence.

18. volentia, in passive sense, 'welcome.' Cp. A. xv. 36, plebi volentia fuere. Sall. Hist. 4, fr. 36, volentia plebi facturos.

LIII.

2. evluisse: Mucianus' charges 'cheapened' all Antonius' adventures, rendered them fruitless to himself.

10, 11. equestri procella, 'a whirlwind of cavalry': while vis peditum implies the shock of a solid body. Livy uses procella several times in this way; and there is a passage in Book XXII. where Hannibal compares the Roman army to the storm-cloud on the mountains.

12. casum Cremonae: a natural euphemism.

17. Daciam. Asiam is the reading of M, but it gives no satisfactory sense, as we hear of no disturbance in Asia. Halm's reading is justified by the following, illis Moesiae pacem; although Daciam componere is a rather strange expression for the repulse of a Dacian inroad. cp. 46.

19. validissimam, strongest in any respect, whether military force or natural wealth.

LIV.

3, 4. confitenti, 'had he confessed.'

6. falsis ingravescebat, 'deception only made his state worse.' The verb is sometimes thus used, with a personal subject: cp. Cic. ad Att. 10. 4, alter ... in dies ingravescit.

10. augendae famae deerant, 'fail to spread the report. Cp. A. i. 1, temporibus Augusti dicendis non defuere decora ingenia.

15. perpulit, used absolutely ('got himself sent,' as we say). Cp. the same construction, i. 66.

20. vestigia, 'ruins.'

23. ultra, here, seems to mean nothing but 'and more than that,' 'besides.'

Suetonius (Oth. 10) tells a story similar to that of Agrestis.

LV.

1, 2. I. Priscum et A. Varum, commanders of the praetorian guard; ii. 92; iii. 36.

5. classicis, sc. Misenensibus. The marines of the fleet had been formed into a legion, which is not to be confused with the prima classica, now in Spain.

7. ceterae cohortes: two praetorian cohorts, with seven vigilum and four urbanæ; v. ii. 93.

9. comitia. The actual farce of election was played by the Senate since the time of Tiberius (A. i. 15, e campo comitia ad patres translata sunt), but the result was still announced (renuntiatum) to the people assembled in the comitia.

10. destinabat. The emperor's designation of candidates—technically, nominatio or commendatio—was the only important part of the election ceremony.

10, 11. foedera sociis; sc. he guaranteed to provincial communities special rights, such as immunity from taxation. Cities and communities, whose position with regard to Rome was defined by a treaty separate and distinct from those laws which provided for the general regulation of the province, were called civitates foederatae; and as the foedus would in most cases, though not in all, involve some kind of privilege, Tacitus uses foedera here in the sense of 'treaties guaranteeing privileges.'

11. Latium externis. The ius Latii or Latinitas gave its possessor the right of trading though not of intermarrying with Rome, and individual members of a 'Latin' community might under certain circumstances obtain the full franchise—if they had held high office in their native town, or migrated to Rome, leaving male issue behind them.

Since the time of Julius Caesar all Italy had possessed the full Roman franchise, and the ius Latii, extending with the extension of the franchise, was from time to time bestowed on provincial communities. A. xv. 32, eodem anno Caesar (Nero) nationes Alpium maritimarum in ius Latii transtulit. What Vitellius did then was nothing new; but Tac. blames his indiscriminate profusion. Externi are non-Italians; socii, non-Romans.

11. dimittere seems to be used in much the same sense as remittere: cp. Caes. B. C. i. 8, Caesarem ... iracundiam suam...rei publicae dimittere.

13, 14. lacerare imperium, 'inflicted severe wounds on the empire'; immunitates would diminish revenue, while indiscriminate concession of the Latin right must weaken the power and position of the ruling nation, by putting it more on a level with its subjects.

Suetonius (Vit. 15) gives much the same account of Vitellius' imprudent liberality.

14. ad magnitudinem, etc., the greed of the recipients only looked to the amount of the gift.

19, 20. ambitione; here, desire for self-advancement, 'selfish views.'

21. incertus animi: the same expression, A. vi. 46.

iudicrō Iuvenalium, an entertainment of a very questionable character, given in Nero's grounds on the right bank of the Tiber, before a select company : A. xiv. 15 ; Suet. Nero, 12.

11. velut ex necessitate, 'on the plea of compulsion.' Cp. Juv. viii. 193, quanti sua funera vendant quid refert? vendunt nullo cogente Nerone.

mimos. The Graeco-Sicilian μῖμοι gave their name to the coarse national farce or harlequinade of the Italians. These performances—generally more or less indecent—developed a literature of their own towards the close of the Republican period, and practically held the stage in the first century A.D.

10. neque quiescentibus graves, sc. they did not insult the Vitellians by a display of superior force. Gravis in the sense of 'offensive' or 'insulting' is common in Cicero: grave est hoc dicere, grave, si adpetimus aliquid (Pro Sulla).

13. secreta : the plural, because Vitellius was offered his choice between various spots. When only one place is meant, the singular is used. Cp. 13, secretum castrorum.

17. litorum, sc. some place on the coast. Some mss. have lictorum.

18, 19. ut, si ... oblivisceretur : oblivisceretur is very much the same as obliturus fuerit ; 'he was in a fair way to forget,' so 'would have forgotten.'

3. incesserent, tamquam: cp. 77, fuere qui Triariam incesserent tamquam superbe saeveque egisset. For tamquam, v. i, 7, note.

7. adfectam eius fidem parce iuvisse, to have been stingy in the assistance he gave to restore his brother's impaired credit. Cp. i. 88, afflicta fides. Parce iuvisse is Halm's reading for MS. praeiuvissse, and would be explained by domo ... acceptis; his stinginess consisted in not giving the required help without security. Halm's reading has considerably more point than that of M, which is moreover an ἀπαξ λεγόμενον. Al. praes iuvisse.

Tacitus' statement here is confirmed by Suetonius, who says that Vespasian was so far from enriching himself by the government of Africa that he was obliged to mortgage his estates to his brother, and try to make money by slave-trading (Vesp. 4).

8. quamquam manente: v. 2, note.

9. offensarum operta: cp. ii. 92, subitae offensae. For the substantival neut. pl., followed by a genitive, cp. A. iv. 41; tacita suspicionum.

13. per condicionem. The plural would be more common; yet Cicero (ad Fam. vi. 2) says, armis condicione positis.

14. in aede Apollinis, built by Augustus on the Palatine.

ut fama fuit: then this interview was apparently not described by Cluvius Rufus in his memoirs.

15. pepigere, used absolutely. Suetonius (Vit. 15) says, salutem sibi et milites sestertium a Flavio Sabino pepigit.

verba vocesque: voces is apparently added to emphasize the antithesis to vultus; the audible word contrasted with the visible expression.

16. Cl. Rufum, on whom v. i. 8; ii. 58. 65: and note at end of ii.

Silius Italicus, present as a friend of Vitellius. He had been consul in the last year of Nero's reign, and subsequently had governed the province of Asia. Apparently for the next thirty years he resided in Italy, till his death by voluntary starvation in his seventy-fifth year. His epic on the Punic wars is now perhaps best remembered in connection with Macaulay's passing allusion to the 'languid hexameters of Silius Italicus.'

Pliny (Ep. iii. 7) says of him, laeserat famam suam sub Nerone (credebatur sponte accusasse), sed in Vitellii amicitia sapienter se et comiter gesserat; ex proconsulatu Asiae gloriam reportaverat, maculam veteris industriae laudabili otio abluerat.

17. degener, 'unworthy of his rank.' Cp. 85, non degeneris animi.

proiectus. Cp. A. iii. 65, proiecta servientium patientia.

LXVI.

5, 6. fidem in libidine victoris; the victor's promise would be kept or broken according to his caprice.

6. superbiam does not quite mean 'generosity.' The sense is, that Vesp. would not feel that secure consciousness of superiority which might enable him to spare Vitellius.

7-9. ne victos... misericordia. The defeated Vitellians would not tamely acquiesce in their position; and so it would be dangerous to Vespasian to grant them their lives. Thus both periculum and misericordia would refer to Vespasian. But Orelli takes misericordia to mean the indignant pity of the Vitellians for their deposed chief.

(Tiedke proposes ne victos quidem laturo—dative agreeing with Vespasiano above—and supposes the sense to be: Vespasian would not have spared Vitellius even as an enemy in arms, and actually defeated, much less would he suffer him to live as an influential citizen. But besides that this gives an unnatural sense to privatus, Vespasian as a matter of fact is spoken of above as the actual victor on the field.)

11. Germanico, ii. 59; his death, iv. 80.

15. aemulatore redituram. M has aemulatore dituram. Heraeus reads aemulo redituram, on the ground that aemulus is more common in Tac. than aemulator. Moreover, aemulator means an imitator, not a rival.

16, 17. casibus dubilis reservatum, spared till success should be assured, so that the Flavians might utilize Valens' intercession in the event of their defeat.

17. praegravem, 'an inconvenient burden.'

18. specimen partium, 'the type of his party,' or its representative man.

19, 20. non a Caesare, etc. This is not historically accurate, as neither Julius Caesar nor Augustus had actually caused their rivals to be put to death. The argument is: if neither Caesar nor Augustus had been generous enough to spare their rivals, it was not likely that Vespasian would show this generosity towards a member of a family of which he had been a dependant.

22. Vitelli. L. Vitellius, the emperor's father: twice Claudius' colleague in the consulship (43 and 47) and once in the censorship (47-51); Suet. Vit. 2, A. xi. 3; H. i. 52, Vitellio tres patris consulatus.

29. per ludibrium, etc. The preposition seems to express the circumstances attending their end; whether they were to meet that end in the midst of mockery and insults or in the doing of some brave deed:

μή μὲν ἀσπουδί γε καὶ ἀκλειῶς ἀπολοῖμην ἀλλὰ μέγα ῥέξας τι καὶ ἐσομένοισι πυθέσθαι.

11. familia, including his slaves and freedmen. Suetonius' account of all this (Vit. 15) is less elaborate, and differs in certain details.

12. blandae et intempestivae : et connects two strongly dissimilar ideas here and elsewhere in Tac. ; the second epithet is almost παρὰ προσδοκᾶν : cp. e.g., 56, iucundum et laesurum.

17. Caecilius Simplex, consul suffectus for November and December. Cp. ii. 60 and i. 77, note.

18. pugionem. Cp. Suet. Galba, 2, dependente a cervicibus pugione.

reddebat, imperf. of attempt. Reddere does not necessarily mean to give back, but sometimes to give as a due ; so here. Cp. Juv. 1, 93, horrenti tunicam non reddere servo.

20. aede Concordiae, at the base of the Capitoline hill, immediately behind the Rostra. Founded in 367 B.C., and rebuilt or added to at different times, it was one of the most magnificent temples of Rome ; and it appears, moreover, to have been used as a kind of museum for works of art. The Senate frequently met in it.

On the history of this temple and its existing remains v. Middleton, Rome in 1885, p. 209 sqq.

21. domum fratris, close to the forum (70).

23. aliud iter, 'every other way.' So Livy often uses ali for ceteri.

24. in sacram viam; the sacred way runs past the Palatine towards the Colosseum; the ascent from it to the Palatium seems to have quitted the road about the point where afterwards stood the arch of Titus.

1. eiurari ... imperium, 'that he was abdicating.' Cp. 37, note.

2. cohortium, of all the cohorts in Rome, the praetorian, urban, and vigiles.

4. in Vesp. sinum cecidisset, 'had come over to his side.' Al. cessisset. Louandre translates se fut jetée aux bras de Vespasien. Cedere in is used in this sense elsewhere: A. i. 1, Lepidi atque Antonii arma in austrum cessit; ii. 23, omne caelium et mare in austrum cessit. Cp. Plin. Paneg. 6, confugit in sinum tuum concussa republica.

5, 6. miles urbanus, sc. cohortes urbanae, not all the soldiers in the city; it has the wider meaning in i. 4, and ii. 94, urbana militia is used for any kind of service within the city.

7. Germanicarum cohortium must mean the three praetorian cohorts (cp. 78) who supported Vitellius. It appears from i. 93 and 94 that many of the men from the army of Germany were enrolled as praetorians; but it is rather surprising that the new cohorts should actually be called Germanicae.

13. lacum Fundani. Orelli says that this was near the Quirinal, and that an inscription (temp. Sulla) mentions the vicus laci (sic) Fundani.

16, 17. improviso tumultu, an ablative partly causal, partly of the attendant circumstance, 'as there was no calculated attack.'

17, 18. re trepida, 'amid the general confusion.'

18, 19. arcem Capitolii. The top of the steep hill now known as the Capitoline, although much altered by building and levelling, still appears to have been shaped into two distinct peaks of nearly equal height. Ancient writers call the northern summit (where now stands the Araceli church), the Arx, the S.W. distinctively Capitolium. It was this latter height which was occupied by Sabinus. Tacitus designates it variously arx Capitolii, Capitolina arx, or Capitolium; but he uses arx simply in the sense of height or summit, and we must not, therefore, suppose that he is referring to the Arx, properly so called, which occupied the northern elevation. What he means is the S.W. part of the hill, on which the principal building was the great temple of Jupiter Capitolinus (itself called Capitolium below).

Between the two heights lay a space known as the Asylum or inter duos lucos. Strabo v. 3. speaks of the Asylum as being μεταξὺ τῆς ἀκρας καὶ τοῦ Καπιτωλίου.

19. mixto milite, i.e., soldiers along with senators and equites. Cp. i. 32, plebs Palatium implebat mixtis servitiis.

23. Gratilla, banished from Rome by Domitian (Plin. Ep. iii. 11; v. 1.)

26. concupia nocte, 'late at night': according to Censorinus, the hour midway between twilight and midnight. Varro de l. L., ii. 7, intempestam Aelius dicebat noctem, quum agendi tempus est nullum, quod alii concubium appellarunt, quod omnes fere tunc cubarent.

29. artas res; cp. iv. 50, artae Leptitanis res.

2. C. Martialem; a military tribune of the same name is mentioned as cashiered by Nero. A. xv. 71.

primipilaribus; v. i. 31, note.

7. inritandis hominum oculis, 'calculated to challenge observation': dative of purpose, used as an epithet. Cp. 20, cetera expugnandis urbibus.

quam = potius quam, a not unfrequent use in Tac.: cp. 60, praedae quam periculorum socias: iv. 76, verba et contiones quam ferrum et arma meditantis.

13, 14. unum e senatoribus, 'only a senator,' merely one of many.

15. captivitatibus urbium: cp. A. xvi. 16, in cladibus legionum aut captivitate urbium.

16. iudicatur; the compound diiudicare is more common in this sense. Cp. Caes. B. C. ii. 32, diiudicata iam belli fortuna.

17. Germaniis, Upper and Lower Germany. The governor, Hordeonius Flaccus, and the legionis legatus Vocula had espoused Vespasian's cause; iv. 31, 37.

18. ultro; v. i. 7, note.

19, 20. pacem ... victis utilia: cp. ii. 20, postquam pax et concordia speciosis et inritis nominibus iactata sunt.

24. summa rerum is a difficult phrase to translate; sometimes it seems to mean 'the main issue' (like res summa in quo res summa loco, Aen. ii.), sometimes 'the general plan to be adopted,' as in 50 and ii. 81; here and in ii. 33, it may at least be paraphrased by 'the chief power' or 'empire.'

27. culpam in militem, etc. The accus. and infin. in a relative clause so abruptly introduced without an antecedent verb of saying is apparently an imitation of similar Greek constructions. For a like abrupt change to oratio obliqua, cp. A. ii. 45, fugacem Maroboduum appellans ... ac mox per dona et legationes petivisse foedus. At the same time, it should be remembered that the reading of M is cuius nimius ardor imparem esse, etc.

28. modestiam: apparently the sense is that Vitellius' counsels of moderation were unable to check the soldiery.

LXXI.

4. imminentia foro templa: for instance the temple of Castor and Saturn.

5. erigunt aciem: cp. iv. 71, aciem in collem erigere. The troops ascended by the Clivus Capitolinus, which very nearly corresponded with the present approach leading to the Piazza del Campidoglio from the south-west corner of the Forum, near the temple of Saturn and the shrines of the Di Consentes. Thus the Capitoline arx or Capitolium, that is the height on which stood the temple of Jupiter,—corresponding more or less with the site of the modern Palazzo Caffarelli,—would be on their left. But it would seem from the following description that the Flavians had occupied not only the Capitolium proper, but also the building now known as the Tabularium: for the Vitellians are described as making an unsuccessful attempt to force their way into a building to the right of the ascent, and separated from that ascent by certain 'porticus,' which corresponds with the Tabularium site. Middleton also supposes that the first attack was directed against the Tabularium; after describing its still existing entrance from the side of the Forum, he adds, "it seems probable that this was the point at which the Vitellian rioters in A.D. 70 broke into the Capitol (Tac. Hist. iii. 71)." What the porticus dextræ subeuntibus were, is not very clear; the existing remains of the porticus decorum consentium are said to date from the Flavian era; perhaps Tacitus wrote before they were built, and is alluding to some old colonnade occupying the same site.

At any rate, the general idea of the attack is plain enough; in order the better to defend the stronghold of the Capitolium proper, the Flavians had occupied the buildings also on the right of the ascent; and into these first, through or over the intervening porticus, the Vitellians try to force their way. In Capitolii fores penetrassent, the proper meaning of Capitolium must be extended to the Tabularium.

13. decora maiorum; cp. Aen. ii. veterum decora alta parentum.

14. tum diversos, etc. Baffled in their first attempt, the Vitellians attack the Capitolium from two opposite points,—on the one side from the lucus asyli, i.e. roughly speaking, the Piazza del Campidoglio; on the other, from the direction of the Tarpeian Rock, that is, apparently, from the south. It seems probable that the Rupes Tarpeia was the escarpment of the hill abutting on the Vicus Jugarius and the Forum, therefore not the point now popularly known as the Tarpeian Rock, which would not be visible from the Forum at all. But modern buildings have made absolutely certain identification impossible.

To ascend to the Asylum, the Vitellians either climb the Clivus Capitolinus (in which case, however, their attack would scarcely be improvisa), or make a circuit by the gradus Monetae at the east side of the hill.

18, 19. in multa pace: cp. the same phrase, i. 77; on the analogy of multo die, multa nocte.

19. in altum edita: as the Capitolium proper stood about fifty feet higher than the Asylum, the roofs of houses built on the latter would naturally be about on a level with the base of the temple.

20. hic ambigitur, etc. M has an obsessi quae crebrior fama nitentes ac progressos depulerint. Halm's reading is justified by the fact that there is some trace of a word having dropped out after fama, and rather improves the sense: dum here as elsewhere introducing a result not contemplated, v. ii. 21, note.

23. aedibus. The temple, though commonly called that of Jupiter Capitolium, really contained three shrines, of Jupiter, Juno, and Minerva. This joint consecration appears to have been of very early date. Middleton says, "It may be presumed that Roma Quadrata, from the date of its founding, possessed that joint temple to Jupiter, Juno, and Minerva (Tinia, Thalna, and Menrva), which, according to the religious rites of the Etruscans, were erected in every new-built town."

aquila, either actual carved eagles, or beams suggesting by their position the outstretched wings of an eagle, supporting the pediment. The fastigium is actually called ἀέτωμα sometimes. ἀέρος is the regular word for a pediment. Cp. Bekk. Anecd. p. 343, ἡ γὰρ ἐπὶ τοῖς προπυλαίοις κατασκευή ἀέρου μμεῖται σχῆμα ἀποτετακτός τὰ πτερὰ. Pind. Ol. 13, τίς γὰρ ἰππέοις ἐν ἔντεσιν μέτρα, ἢ θεῶν ναοῖσιν ὀλυνῶν βασιλεῖα δίδυμον ἐπέθηκεν.

LXXII.

2. rei p. P. R.; full form respublica P. R. Quiritium (Liv. xiii. 10).

5. auspicato, 'with all due solemnities': cp. i. 84, note.

pignus imperii. In the popular mind, the duration of the Roman empire was bound up with the safety of the Capitoline temple. Cp. iv. 54, nihil aequè quam incendium Capitoli ut finem imperii adesse crederent impulerat. Hor. Od. iii., 30, usque ego postera crescam laude recens, dum Capitolium scandet cum tacita virgine pontifex.

6, 7. Porsenna dedita urbe. This does not tally with historical tradition; but it is supported by Plin. N. H. xxxiv. 14-39, in foedere quod expulsi regibus populo R. dedit Porsenna, nominatim comprehensum invenimus, ne ferro nisi in agri cultu uterentur. Here and elsewhere Tac. seems to follow authorities unknown to us: cp. his statement about Servius Tullius below.

8. excindi; on the construction v. 68 note.

8, 9. civili bello, the contest between Sulla and Marius. The Capitol was burnt Aug. 4, 83 B.C.; who set fire to it was unknown; hence fraude privata. Fraus is used here in its older sense of 'crime.'

10, 11. quo tantae cladis, etc. Orelli (after M) reads quo tantae cladis pretio stetit? pro patria bellavimus? i.e. what was there to compensate for the disaster?

13. spe magis futurae magnitudinis. Livy says very much the same thing, i. 38, iam praesagiente animo futuram olim magnitudinem loci.

14. quam quo; we should expect quam quod; but quo is used on the analogy of non quo (= not because).

15. Tullius sociorum studio; nothing further is known of this.

16. Pometia, in Latium, the capital of the Volsci.

17. gloria operis, M. Some editors read gloria patrati operis.

18. H. Pulvillus, iterum consul, 507 B.C.; Polybius, Livy, and Plutarch date the dedication two years earlier, in his first consulship.

21. situm, 'erected.' Only Tac. uses the word in this sense: cp. A. ii. 7, aram Druso sitam.

22. quadring. quindecim, 425 properly; in the original probably the number was in Roman figures (ccccxxv.), hence easily mistaken.

23. curam, sc. curam operis. Plin. N. H. xxxvi. sic est inchoatum Athenis templum Jovis Olympii, ex quo Sulla Capitolinis aedibus advexerat columnas.

25. felicitati. Sulla took the title of Felix after his final triumph over Marius. Plin. N. H. vii. 43, hoc tamen nempe felicitati suae deesse confessus est, quod Capitolium non dedicavisset.

Catuli; son of the conqueror of the Cimbri. He dedicated the temple B.C. 69. Dio, xliii. 14, says that Julius Caesar ordered his own name to be substituted for that of Catulus in the dedicatory inscription; but Tac.'s statement to the contrary is plain.

26. tanta Caes. opera; ta Caesarum M. which may stand for either tot or tanta: tanta must mean something like tam magnifica, although Orelli says that this would not make sense. He reads tot.

LXXIII.

3. ex diverso = ex adverso, cp. 5.

4. captus animi, 'paralysed.' Cp. 58, aeger animi, ii. 23, promptus animi.

5. non competere, 'had not the use of.' Cp. A. iii. 46, oppidani neque oculis neque auribus satis competeabant. Sallust also uses the word once in this sense.

11, 12. cuncta sanguine, etc., sc. all was a confused scene of slaughter: cp. Liv. i. 29, omnia ferro flammaque miscet. On miscere v. i. 38, note.

12, 13. pauci militarium virorum; the genitive appears to be one of definition; cp. 61, paucos resistentium, explained by Heraeus as meaning 'a few who resisted': so 12 paucis resistentium. Militares viri are not 'military men,' but 'good soldiers,' 'soldierly men.'

14. Pacensis had been deprived by Galba of the tribunate of an urban cohort; reinstated by Otho, he was entrusted with a command in the force sent to Gallia Narbonensis. i. 20, 87; ii. 12.

17. Qu. Atticum, consul with Caecilius Simplex for November and December. i. 77.

17, 18. umbra honoris, 'the empty distinction.' Yet the consulship was an eagerly-coveted honour in the latest times, long after it had been stripped of all real importance.

18, 19. edicta in populum ('manifestoes') should probably be taken together: 'to scatter among the people' would require inter populum.

23. signo, 'the password.'

LXXIV.

2, 3. lineo amictu; apparently the sacricolae were worshippers of Isis, as Suetonius says that Domitian was Isiaco celatus habitu, and Juv. vi. 532, calls these sacricolae 'grex liniger.' According to the doctrine of this cult, woollen clothing was unclean. It is remarkable that the rites of Isis were actually celebrated in the Capitol. But there was probably a temple of Isis at Pompeii as early as 105 B.C.: Domitian rebuilt one in the Campus Martius to celebrate his escape. See Dill's Roman Society from Nero to Marcus Aurelius, Bk. IV. ch. 5.

Dio, xlv. 17, simply says that Domitian and Sabinus the younger escaped from the Capitol and took refuge in a private house.

5. potienti: for this word in the sense, 'to be in possession of,' cp. ii. 101, potiente rerum Flavia domo. It is found with this comparatively rare meaning in Cicero; cp. pro Rosc. Am. 70.

contubernio: cp. note on i. 43, where publicus servus is equivalent to the aedituus of the present passage.

7. Iovi Conservatori. Coins of Domitian bear the figure of Jupiter with the inscription, 'Iovi Conservatori sc.' (i.e. senatus consulto ?); others, 'Iuppiter Conservator,' or 'Iuppiter Custos.' The temple dedicated Iovi custodi was on the Capitol near the hundred steps of the Tarpeian rock; Suet. Dom. 5.

7, 8. casus ... expressam, sc. casus expressos repraesentantem. Cp. Val. Fl. Argon. i. 491, casusque tuos expressa, Phalere, arma geris; and Virgil's flores inscripti nomina regum.

8. exprimere as applied to works of art means 'to mould in relief.'

13. navatae: enouatae M, whence al. enavatae. Cp. 16, aviditate navandae operae.

18. Vitellum ... pervicere: pervincere with ut rarely takes an object accusative. Cp. however, Liv. xlii. 45, pervicerat Rhodios ut Romanorum societatem retinerent.

17. Gemonias, sc. scalas, on the eastern slope of the Capitol, where it was customary to expose the bodies of criminals executed in the adjacent Tullianum; cp. 85.

LXXV.

2. xxxv stipendia in rep. fecerat, 'had served his country for thirty-five years.'

4. sermonis nimius erat probably means rather that he was boastful than merely talkative. For the genitive, cp. 73; Liv. vi. 11, nimius animi.

5. xii quibus, etc. Under Augustus and Tiberius the praefectus urbi only held office as the temporary representative of an absent emperor. Later, the post was permanent.

6. calumniatus est: as Tacitus expressly allows that sermonis nimius erat, there is no idea of false accusation in calumniatus: 'rumour could charge him with no other fault.'

8, 9. inter omnes constiterit: the perfect subj. seems to weaken the force of the assertion here and in ii. 76, propius fuerit. The meaning is, 'all will probably agree.' It appears to be a kind of conditional sentence with protasis suppressed.

12. dirempta, 'put an end to.' Cp. 81, dirempta belli commercia.

14. sed resumes the narrative interrupted at the end of 74.

15. vicem reddens, i.e. making Atticus a return for helping him out of a difficulty.

18, 19. invidiam crimenque adgnosuisse: sc. recognized how odious a deed it was, and how real a ground of accusation. Heräus, however, compares it to prospera adgnosceret (52), so that thus adgnosuisse would mean, 'took upon himself the responsibility.'

LXXVI.

2. Feroniam, an Italian goddess of freedom apparently; Liv. xxii. 1, the libertinae make her an offering. She had temples at Praeneste and on Soracte, and a third here spoken of, three miles from Tarracina. Cp. Hor. Sat. i. 5, ora manusque tua lavimus, Feronia, lympa: milia tum pransi tria repimus atque subimus 'impositum saxis late candentibus Anxur'. Perhaps we should read apud Feroniae on the analogy of ad Martis (Cic. ad Qu. Fr. iii. 7) and similar phrases.

Tarracinae: cp. 57.

4. egredi moenia. Notice the silver age construction of egredi with an accusative.

8, 9. noctu dieque. Some edd. suggest diuque, but the alteration seems unnecessary.

9. fluxi, etc., 'roaming uncontrolled and waking the echoes of the beautiful coast.'

personantes is used transitively as in Aen. vi. 171, forte cava dum personat aequora concha.

LXXVII.

2. praesidium is used here in the sense of an armed force, as in 78 (abscisis omnibus praesidiis) and iv. 56, pollicitus si praesidium daretur iturum in Batavos.

3. traditurum: M has tradi futurum, which of course respuit Latinitas as Orelli says.

4. summis montium iugis: abl. of place without preposition. Cp. 48, eodem latere sitam.

6. inermos, M: early editions read inermes.

10, 11. cuncta pari formidine implicabantur, 'here too all was a bewildering scene of terror.' implicari is much the same as the more usual misceri; v. i. 38, note.

11. paganis, 'civilians,' as in 43.

14, 15. ruentium. Nipperdey proposed irruentium, but the alteration is unnecessary, as the simple verb is several times used by Tacitus with the idea of blind headlong haste. Cp. 82, desperatione sola ruebant. In earlier writers rue generally means to fall rather than to hasten. But Cicero more than once uses it almost as a synonym of furere, as opposed to consistere. Cp. Phil. ii. 10.

16. foedatus = foede laceratus. Virgil uses foedare in this way; Aen. ii. 55, ferro Argolicas foedare latebras; iii. 241, obscenas pelagi ferro foedare volucres.

in ore: cp. 36.

18. tamquam: v. i. 8, note.

20. lauream: despatches of good import had a laurel leaf attached to them, while a feather is said by some to have been the sign of bad news (v. however Mayor's note on Juv. iv. 149, anxia praecipiti venisset epistula pinna). Cp. Pliny, Paneg. 8, allata erat ex Pannonia laurea; Plin. N. H. xv. 30, laurus Romanis praecipue laetitiae victoriarumque nuntia additur litteris.

22. perdomandae Campaniae insistere, 'to wait till he had reduced Campania.' Cp. a somewhat similar use of the word in ii. 46, insistere spei.

24. recens victoria, 'fresh from their victory,' 'flushed with success.' Earlier writers sometimes use recens a in this sense; so Varro says, pullus a partu recens. Cp. Aen. ix. 455, recens caede locus.

26. haud parva mole certatum, 'there would have been a desperate conflict.' For moles in the sense of difficulty (whence the use of molior, v. ii. 35, note) cp. 84, plurimum molis in oppugnatione castrorum fuit; A. iii. 78, haud magna mole Piso promptus ferocibus in sententiam trahitur; Aen. i. 33, tantae molis erat Romanam condere gentem.

27. infami: he had been notorious as a delator; cp. 38, datae L. Vitellio delationis partes.

28. quo modo in sentences of comparison is often used by Tac. instead of quemadmodum, which is commoner in other authors; yet Cicero uses quomodo thus sometimes.

LXXVIII.

2, 3. festos Saturni dies, beginning Dec. 17.

3. Oriculum, in Umbria, south of Narnia, near the confluence of Nar and Tiber.

3, 4. causa ... ut: cp. Cic. pro Font. 36, magna causa absolutionis haec est, ne quae insignis huic imperio macula suscipiatur.

13. descivissent, subjunctive expressing the motive alleged by the duces ('since, as they said,'). Videbatur is in the indicative because the verb of thinking is now actually expressed and the subjunctive is thus no longer necessary. Heräus, however, says the difference of mood is simply an intentional irregularity.

16. tres cohortes, praetorias. As there were 16 praetorian cohorts (ii. 93), and 14 had taken the field (iii. 55), we must suppose that of these 14 Vitellius had brought one back to Rome with him as his escort (v. 56); so that after six had been detached under L. Vitellius seven would now be the force at Narnia. Nipperdey solves the difficulty by altering quattuordecim (55) to tredecim.

18. haud facile, etc.: cp. 28, note.

20. praepostero, 'ill-timed': the ablative and dum with the indicative here express the same thing—the reason why Antonius deserved blame. For dum v. note on ii. 21. Invidiam cannot well mean 'invidiam deusti Capitolii,' for it was exactly this calamity which Tac. alleges to have been brought about by the delay of the Flavians and the possible quarrels of Antonius and Mucianus. All the delay is manifestly represented as preceding the conflagration.

22, 23. finem eius insignivere, 'made its end the more remarkable' by the burning of the Capitol, etc.

24. transversis itineribus, etc. Cerialis was to traverse by cross roads the Sabine country lying between the via Flaminia to the west and via Salaria to the east, and so enter the city by the latter route, through the Colline gate. Plin. N. H. xxxi. 7, says the via Salaria was so called because it was the route by which the Sabines brought home their salt from the city: not a convincing derivation.

LXXIX.

1. Saxa rubra, about nine miles from Rome, on the via Flaminia.

2. multo noctis: cp. multa nocte, 77; also A. ii. 21, sero diei, Liv. x. 32 and xxii. 45, multum diei.

10. gnara, in passive sense: cp. v. 17 and iii. 8, ignara. It is thus used ten times in the Annals, apparently.

14, 15. foeda fuga, ablative of attendant circumstance: were there no adjective the construction would probably be in fugam consternantur, as in Liv. x. 43.

15. Fidenas, on the via Salaria, about five miles N.E. of Rome.

LXXX.

1, 2. vulgus urbanum, i.e. probably the population not included in the 35 tribes, as we hear (58) that Vitellius vocari tribus iubet, dantes nomina sacramento adigit. This vulgus would be largely composed of freedmen.

3. quod cuique obvium; the relative is in the singular to correspond with cuique.

6. praetexto rei publicae, 'on the ground of the public weal.'

10. A. Rusticus, tribunus pl. 66 A.D. had interceded on behalf of the Stoic Thræsea: he was put to death by Domitian's order in 94, apparently because he had eulogized Thræsea and Helvidius Priscus. A letter of Pliny's (i. 5) speaks of Rusticus as being called Vitelliana cicatrice stigmosus, an evident allusion to his wound.

11. dignatio, 'his known worth,' ἀξίωμα. Elsewhere it has rather the meaning of 'rank': cp. i. 19, 52.

12. pulsantur. M has palantur. Ritter would read pelluntur.

proximus licitor. The lictors walked before the consul or other magistrate in single file, and the nearest to the magistrate's person ranked highest. Cp. Liv. xxiv. 44, consul animadvertere proximum lictorem iussit.

LXXXI.

1. Musonius Rufus, spoken of A. xiv. 59 and xv. 71 as a Stoic teacher, and friend of Thræsea. Stobæus preserves some fragments of his teaching. Following the usual tendency of Roman philosophy, this Stoic or Cynic was less a speculative philosopher than a 'physician of souls.' (Dill, Roman Society.)

2. philosophiae; generally Tac. avoids the Greek words philosophia and philosophus (although they may be said to have been naturalized since the Ciceronian period) in accordance with Cicero's own general principle of dispensing with Greek words where possible. Thus philosophia is said to be found only thrice in Tac., and then only to avoid repetition. Cp. his preference of morbus pedum to podagra, and the periphrastic description of a conically-shaped stone in ii. 3.

3. aemulatus, sc. a zealous advocate of Stoicism.

4. disserens followed by an accusative is only known to Cicero when the object is a neuter pronoun.

9. epistalis, 'a letter,' as elsewhere in Tac.

10. eximi, etc., 'he requested that the crisis should be postponed for a day.'

13, 14. belli commercia, an imitation of Virgil's belli commercia Turnus sustulit ista prior iam tum Pallante perempto (A. x. 532).

LXXXII.

2, 3. pontem Mulvium, over the Tiber, on the via Flaminia, two miles from Rome; where stands the modern Ponte Molle.

6. consuleret = parceret. Cp. A. iii. 46, fugientibus consulite.

9. tripertito agmine: the centre on the via Flaminia, the right and left wings on the Tiber bank and the via Salaria respectively.

13. praesidiis: cp. 77.

14. varia, sc. various in their results.

16. conflictati, 'seriously embarrassed.' Cp. 16.

17. Sallustianos hortos, grounds laid out by the historian Sallust and his adopted son; later they became imperial property. "They lay east of the via Flaminia, and west of the collis hortorum, the modern Pincian" (Heraeus); more accurately, in the valley between the Pincian and Quirinal. Till recently, at any rate, considerable remains of Sallust's house were in existence. Cp. Middleton, pp. 405 seqq.

20, 21. donec ... circumvenirentur; on the subjunctive, v. note on 23.

22. in campo Martio: whither the centre and right of the Flavian troops would naturally tend.

24. quamquam puls; cp. i. 43, note.

LXXXIII.

2. iudicro: as if it were a gladiatorial contest.

hos, rursus illos = modo hos, modo illos; the same expression, 22. Some mss. have hos modo, rursus illos, but modo seems to be interpolated.

3. fovebat, 'encouraged.' Cp. among other instances, i. 8, metu tamquam alias partes fovissent.

inclinasset. Tacitus appears to use quotiens with either indicative or subjunctive; cp. i. 10, quotiens expedierat. Generally speaking, writers of the silver age prefer the subjunctive in clauses expressing indefinite frequency, where Cicero and Caesar would use the indicative.

4. tabernis, shops in the lower parts of houses, more especially of the blocks of lodging-houses (insulae).

5. erui... expostulantes; cp. i. 82, ostendi expostulantes.

8. facies, 'aspect.' ii. 89, decora facies.

10. scortis similes, exoleti.

11. captivitate, 'taking.' Cp. 70.

12. crederes, 'one would have thought.' Cp. i. 10, palam laudares, 'one would have praised.'

14. bis L. Sulla, 88 and 82 B.C.

semel Cinna, 87 B.C.

15. inhumana, 'unnatural.' Cp. ii. 70.

16. minimo temporis; cp. 79, multo noctis.

17. festis diebus, the Saturnalia, 'as if the fighting were only another carnival amusement.'

18. fruebantur is used absolutely, as in Plin. Paneg. 34, agnoscebamur et fruebamur.

LXXXIV.

1. plurimum molis, cp. note on 77.

1, 2. castrorum, the praetorian camp, to the left of the approach to the city by the via Salaria.

3, 4. veterum cohortium: the praetorians dismissed by Vitellius (ii. 67) who had taken service under Vespasian (ii. 82).

5. testudinem. Probably what is meant here is a movable shed, "a military machine moving upon wheels, and roofed over, used in besieging cities, under which the soldiers worked in undermining the walls or otherwise destroying them"; Dict. of Antiq. According to the same authority, "the name was also applied to the covering made by a close body of soldiers who placed their shields over their heads to secure themselves against the darts of the enemy." This would be the testudo of iii. 27 and 28 (a 'Schilddach' as Orelli says, while the shed in the present passage is a 'Schutzdach').

7. hausissent = perfuncti essent. Cp. the Greek use of ἀντλῆν in the same sense.

consummari, sc. this was the goal of all their labours.

12. inquietare, 'mar.'

14. amplectebantur. It would be better to punctuate after foedare, making the imperfect describe in a word the whole scene of which the historic infinitives give the details; it seems very harsh to construct inquietare etc., as infinitives after amplectebantur. Orelli says, depingit ultimum ac desperatum Vitellianorum furorem, dicens, ad ultimum sine causa ab his homines obtruncatos horumque cruore domos atque etiam aras foedatas esse, quibus facinoribus cladem suam quasi solati sint; but the meaning seems to be simply that the soldiers found their one consolation in dying hard in defence of their homes.

17. contrariis vulneribus, 'with their wounds in front.' Cp. Liv. ii. 6, contrario ictu per parmam uterque transfixus. With the next words one may compare Euripides' description of the death of Polyxena, πολλὴν πρόνοιαν εἶχεν εὐσχήμως πεσεῖν.

Dio (lxv. 19) says that 50,000 men fell in the fighting of these days; considering the number of combatants, this looks like an exaggeration.

20. per aversam Palatii partem, 'through the back of the Palatium,' perhaps through the Tiberiana domus, which lay behind the Palatium, and on the opposite side to the part of the city where most of the fighting would be going on. Cp. i. 27.

21. Aventinum is said by Heräus to be a gloss, based on 70 Aventinum, et penates uxoris, and certainly we should expect in Aventinum.

in domum uxoris. Suetonius, however (Vit. 16) calls it paterna domus. He says that Vitellius was accompanied by his baker and cook.

22. diem, 'the dangers of daylight.'

27. terret solitudo ; cp. Virg. Aen. ii. 755, ipsa silentia terrent.

29. pudenda latebra. Suetonius (Vit. 16) says, confugit in cellam ianitoris, religato pro foribus cane lectoque et culcita objectis. Dio, lxx. 20 makes the latebra a dog kennel (οἰκημα σκοτεινὸν ἐν ᾧ ἐτρέφοντο κύες).

34. obvius e Germanicis, etc. According to Dio, the soldier, a Gaul, tried to kill Vitellius, to save him from insults : he wounded the emperor, and at once killed himself ; lxx. 21.

35, 36. vel quo . . eximeret is co-ordinate with per iram, and the two together belong to the first limb of the indirect question.

37. in incerto. Cp. the same expression, i. 37, and ii. 45, in ambiguo.

LXXXV.

2, 3. cadentes statuas suas : cp. the description of Sejanus' fall, Juv. x. 56, seqq. The two passages may be well read together.

3. rostra, whence Vitellius had addressed the people (68).

Galbae occisi locum, near the lacus Curtii (i. 41).

4. Gemonias : cp. 74.

LXXXVI.

1. Luceria, in Apulia, west of Arpi, now Lucera. Nuceriae in Suet. Vit. i. should probably be corrected to Luceriae.

2. explebat ; he was put to death Dec. 20, 69. Dio, lxx. 22 makes him 54.

4. patris : cp. 66.

7, 8. perinde . . quam, instead of the more usual perinde ac : cp. iv. 2.

9, 10. ni adsit ... vertuntur; as vertuntur expresses that the change is usual or likely to take place, and does not denote any particular occurrence, the indicative can be used to answer the subjunctive adsit. Cp. Plin. Ep. i. 8, nec si casu aliquo non sequatur (gloria), idcirco, quod gloriam meruit, minus pulcrum est. The construction is common, especially in the Silver Age.

11. contineri: cp. i. 84, note on res militares continentur.

12. meruit, 'deserved,' as in 78 (crimen meruit).

rei publicae, etc. The sense is: no doubt it was better for the country that Vitellius should fall; at the same time those who betrayed him cannot claim to have acted on this ground—cannot call themselves true patriots—if they had also betrayed Galba, whose rule was really beneficial to Rome. Such would be Caecina and Bassus; ii. 100. On imputare ('make a merit of') v. i. 38, note.

16. die, poetical equivalent of 'sole.'

20. Caesarem, till Hadrian's time the title borne by sons of the reigning emperor.

22. deduxit: the soldiers escort Domitian home, just as in republican times the successful candidate for office was accompanied to his house by a throng of friends. The custom survives, but the citizen is superseded by the soldier.

I.

5. trucidatis: for this abl. abs. not in agreement with any definite person, cp. i. 85, animum vultumque conversis.

7. procerum habitu et iuventa = procerum habitu iuvenem: it would be assumed that tall young men were Germans who had served in Vitellius' auxiliary cohorts. On the stature of the Germans cp. v. 14: Germanos proceritas corporum extollit.

8. populi, sc. togatorum.

10. verterat: Heräus and Orelli think the pluperfect indicates the rapidity of the change (cp. ii. 73, proruperant and note): but this is not necessary; the tense expresses the motive, which is naturally anterior to the act (nihil usquam secretum aut clausum sinebant).

13. si resisteretur: cp note on i. 49, si mali forent.

13, 14. nec deerat ... prodere: so iii. 58, nec deerat ipse... elicere. For the various constructions with nec deerat, v. note on i. 23.

ultro: v. note on i. 7.

16. et fortuna: et is interposed because fortuna is not merely another item but a general summing-up of the situation. One ms. has forma, which gives perhaps a better sense, but there can be no doubt that fortuna is right.

19 temperandae victoriae impares, 'unable to make a moderate use of their victory': cp. Cic. pro Marc. 8, victoriam temperare.

21. pax et quies: i.e., it is only in peace that bonae artes find a field.

II.

1. sedem Caesaris, the Palatium; cp. iii. 86. This sentence is somewhat complicated by what Orelli calls Tacitus' contempt of the commonplace. We should expect the adversative part to begin at nondum (sed nondum, etc.), or else to have a participle instead of agebat: cp. 28, nec quievire Ubii quo minus praedas e Germania peterent, primo impune, dein circumventi sunt; where primo impune stands in the same loose connection with the first part of the sentence as nondum ad curas intentus in the present passage.

3. agebat, 'played the part of': cp. i. 30, cum amicum imperatoris ageret.

praetorii: the praetorian cohorts were reduced by Vespasian to their former number, nine.

10. reliqua belli: cp. the same expression, 51.

11. Ariciam: cp. iii. 36.

12. intra Bovillas stetit, 'did not advance beyond Bovillae,' a town on the Appian way, ten miles from Rome.

23. prosperis is a kind of abl. abs. For the use of the neuter cp. the same word in iii. 64.

23. adversis abstractus, 'hurried to his ruin by (his brother's) misfortunes': cp. A. iv. 13, paternis adversis abstractus.

III.

1. Bassus had betrayed the Adriatic fleet to Vespasian: iii. 12.

3. municipiorum, all the towns, including coloniae, not only municipia properly so called: cp. note on iii. 34.

5. Capuae, which had remained loyal to Vitellius (iii. 57), while Tarracina had declared for Vespasian.

8. vicem exsolvere, to repay. Cp. iii. 75, vicem reddens.

11. diximus: iii. 77.

12. in isdem anullis, the sign of equestrian rank. Cp. i. 13, ii. 57.

13, 14. cuncta principibus solita: for the dative, cp. 13, barbaris solitum; v. 8, solita regibus. Virgil uses the same construction, A. xi. 383. On the powers ordinarily decreed to the princeps, v. i. 47, decernitur Othoni tribunicia potestas et nomen Augusti et omnes principum honores: and ii. 55 on Vitellius' accession. The usual decree would confer on the emperor the tribunician power, title of Augustus, and proconsulare imperium. See also Furneaux' introduction to his ed. of Annals i-vi.

On the present occasion the Senatus consultum must have been closely followed by the Lex de Imperio Vespasiani, of which a large part is preserved in the Capitoline Museum at Rome.

15. Gallias, etc. Almost every province of the empire had had its share in the wars of the last eighteen months: Galba and Vindex had led the armies of Gaul and Spain; Vitellius' starting point had been the Rhine, Antonius' Illyricum, and Vespasian's the provinces of the East.

21. ea prima specie forma. Vespasian's letter must have been written after the fall of Cremona, but before the death of Vitellius: hence he writes in the tone of a general whose enemy is still before him, but who is morally certain of victory: and so—to those who look farther than the prima species—he speaks as though the prize were within his grasp.

22. civilla, i.e. without undue assumption.

23. nec senatus obsequium deerat: senatus is a subjective genitive. Several French translators have entirely mistaken the sense, one rendering parlant du sénat avec déférence.

24. praetura, urbana: cp. Suet. Dom. i. honorem praeturae urbanae consulari potestate suscepit titulo tenuis; nam jurisdictionem ad collegam proximum transtulit. Dom. no doubt received the consulare imperium on account of the absence of the two real consuls, his father and brother. The passage is excellently illustrated by a coin which bears on one side the head of Vespasian with the inscr. IMP. CAESAR VESPASIANVS AVG., and on the other those of Titus and Domitian with their respective titles of consul and praetor.

IV.

3. publice loqueretur, i.e. address the state council on matters of state. It was not customary for anyone except the emperor to address an official letter to the consuls or senate. Provincial governors must have written despatches relating to their provinces; but Mucianus' letter I suppose referred to the general political situation. Cp. ii. 55, gratior Caecinae modestia fuit, quia non scripsisset (ad senatum).

loqueretur: the question being only "rhetorical" we should expect the accus. and infin.; but cp. 62, qui dux viae.

4. loco sententiae, as we should say, 'from his place in the house.' When asked for his sententia on any matter he might egredi relationem and say what he wished.

9. erant: the plural in such cases is usual in Tacitus. Cp. note on inridebant, ii. 30.

10, 11. triumphalia, sub. insignia: v. note on i. 79.

11. bello civium = bello civili.

Sarmatas: a Roman general could not have a triumphus for a victory over his countrymen, so the senate had to fall back on the repulse of the Dacian raid described iii. 46.

12. consularia: cp. consularia ornamenta, i. 79. Consularis "under the empire became a mere title for the higher class of officers, who thereby obtained permission to have the insignia of a consul without ever having actually been consuls," Dict. of Antiq. Thus it was the regular title for the governors of imperial provinces.

15. Val. Asiaticus, Vitellius' son-in-law: i. 59.

15, 16. consul designatus: according to Suet. Vit. 11, Vitellius himself was consul perpetuus designatus; there could thus of course only be one consul-elect besides the emperor. Asiaticus had apparently been elected to take office at the beginning of the year 70.

The procedure in the Senate follows the ordinary practice; the consules designati give their vote first. Cp. e.g. Cic. Phil. v. 35.

16. manuque: cp. Vopisc. Aurel. 20, aliis manum porrigentibus, aliis pedibus in sententiam euntibus.

19. praet. design.: consulares would vote before praetores designati, who would be followed by praetorii.

21. principem ... falsa aberant. One MS. shows signs of a word being lost after principem; hence some edd. read ita falsa aberant, but the change of construction (ita falsa aberant = falsis carentem) would be very harsh.

V.

1. iterum: the first mention is in ii. 91.

2. virī saepius memorandi: the story of Helvidius' banishment and death was probably told in one of the books now lost. Boissier (Opposition sous les Césars) has some interesting pages on the Stoics of whom Helvidius and Thrasea were the most prominent figures. According to his view the critical, if not actually hostile, position assumed by the Stoics towards the government of their day was based rather on a difference of moral than of political ideal. Stoicism did not necessarily regret the Republic; what it denounced was the badness of individual emperors, not the imperial system. Indeed according to its strict doctrine the ideal government would be the rule of a perfectly good despot.

4. origine, etc.: Halm's correction of the MS. regione Italiae Caracinae municipio Cluvio patrē. Heräus and Wolff read origine Caracina e municipio Cluviano, patrē; Orelli (otherwise with MS.) Cluvio patrē. Regione Italiae certainly looks like a gloss. The Caracini were Samnites, settled round Aufidena; Cluviae, a town near Bovianum.

5. patre: cp. A. iii. 75, Capito ... patre praetorio; and Virgil's Euneus Clytio patrē.

5, 6. ordinem duxisset: sc. had been a centurion. The subjunctive is used because the relative clause takes the place of a predicative substantive (e.g. primi pili centurione). Cp. i. 10, note on et cui.

7. altioribus studiis, sc. philosophy as distinguished from the studia civilia of the bar and senate.

12. cetera extra animum, 'all external things,' as well even bona corporis (health, etc.) as res extraneae more properly so called—friends, wealth, and so forth.

13. quaestorius: he was quaestor of Achaia under Nero. A man of the same name and perhaps an elder brother of the Stoic was legatus legionis in 51 (A. xii. 49), and subsequently tribunus plebis (A. xiii. 29).

14. Thrasea: v. note on ii. 91, and Mayor's note on Juv. v. 36. For his death, v. A. xvi. 33.

15. hausit: cp. Agric. 4, studium philosophiae acrius hausisse.

17. metus: metum would be the subjective feeling, while the plural expresses rather the objective causes of fear. Cp. ii. 12.

VI.

2. Sapientibus: for the dative cp. 2, saeptus armatis, and note on i. 11, procuratoribus. Novissima, "the last infirmity of noble minds": cp. Agric. 9, fama cui saepe etiam boni indulgent. Epict. 33, ἔσχατος λέγεται τῶν παθῶν χιτῶν ἢ φιλοδοξία· διότι τῶν ἄλλων πολλάκις δι' αὐτὴν ἀποδυνάμειν αὐτὴν προσίχεται μάλλον τῇ ψυχῇ.

3. in exsiliium pulsus: technically his punishment was relegatio, not exsiliium in the special sense, which implied outlawry. Helvidius was only forbidden to reside in Italy and retired to Apollonia (Schol. on Juv. v. 36). But exsiliium is often used in the wider sense to include every form of banishment, and does not necessarily imply the loss of civil status.

4. Eprium: v. on ii. 53.

6. in studia diduxerat 'split into opposite parties,' as in ii. 68.

8. sternebatur: the meaning of the imperfect is, that a number of persons were likely to be involved in Eprius' fall = 'his fall meant ruin to a crowd of offenders' (apparently the meaning of rei here, although in Cicero it only means 'accused').

9. egregiis utriusque orationibus: no doubt the speeches would be accessible to Tacitus, or at least they would survive in living memory.

14. eo senatus die: a good day's work: yet we need not suppose that the passing of the decree respecting Vespasian's imperium occupied much time, seeing that the powers conferred were probably identical with those granted to former emperors. Moreover the senate had already ratified three accessions within the last twelve months. Ceterum resumes the interrupted narrative, like  $\delta' \alpha\upsilon\tau\iota$  in Greek.

17. a magistr. iuratis: sc. by the consuls, who swore to choose honestly.

VII.

1. rubor, a picturesque equivalent for 'shame': one might paraphrase by 'personal vanity.'

3. altercationem: Cicero writes of such an altercatio with his old enemy Clodius. Here it is opposed to continua oratio, as in Liv. iv. 6, cum res a perpetuis orationibus in altercationem vertisset.

6. quis multos anteiret: and so might expect to be selected.

13. aures imbuant, 'accustom him to hear': cp. iii. 15, imbucetur.

14. Sorano, Barea Soranus, cons. design. 52: for other notices of him, cp. 10, 40, A. xvi. 21, 23 seqq. According to the last reference Nero virtutem ipsam excindere concupivit, interfecto Thræsea Paeto et Barea Sorano: and the story of their defence and death is told in the concluding chapters of A. xvi. Nothing is known of Sentius, apparently.

18. instrumentum: so in i. 22 the astrologers are called 'pessimum principalis matrimonii instrumentum,' the vilest furniture of the palace.

21. praemiis: Eprius received 5 million sesterces for his prosecution of Thræsea (A. xvi. 33).

Notice the rhetorical turns in this chapter: such as the use of anaphora (e.g. the repetition of pertinere) and of synonyms, sorte et urna, etc.

VIII.

3. vetera exempla : Cic. ad Att. i. 19, mentions the choosing by lot of envoys to be sent into Gaul. Cp. Dio Cass. lix. 23, πρέσβεις τε ἐπ' αὐτοῖς ἄλλους κλήρω καὶ τὸν Κλαύδιον αἰρετὸν ἐπεμψαν.

4. ambitioni, 'intrigue.'

6, 7. sufficere omnes obsequio, 'anyone was good enough to do homage to the emperor.'

11. civitatis formam : not the republic, but the empire : as indeed is shown by instituerint.

15. per eius modi imagines inlusisse, 'had mocked (the senate) with such idle forms' as a regular trial : Marcellus represents himself as the slave of circumstances.

16. aliis, such as Helvidius.

18. se unum esse, etc. : sc. he was in the same case as his neighbours. Cp. iii. 70, unum e senatoribus.

20, 21. senem triumphalem : Vespasian was 59 years old : he had won triumphalia insignia as commander of a legion in Britain under Claudius.

22, 23. sine fine dominationem, 'absolute sovereignty' : cp. iii. 8, sine luctu victoriam.

25. diversis studiis accipiebantur, 'found eager partisans on both sides.'

26. mediis, the middle party, those who were indifferent : cp. medii ac plurimi, i. 19.

IX.

2. tum a praetoribus : not, as in Tacitus' own time, by the two praefecti aerarii Saturni. Cp. Suet. Claud. 24, collegio quaestorum curam aerarii Saturni reddidit, quam medio tempore praetores aut uti nunc praetura functi sustinuerant. The administration of the treasury—since 28 B.C., when it was separated from the quaestorship and entrusted to two praefecti aerarii who were chosen by the senate from the praetorii—had undergone various changes. In 23 B.C., Augustus caused two praetors to be chosen by lot, who bore the title praetorii aerarii : this system lasted till the reign of Claudius, who in 44 (v. sup.) restored the aerarium to the quaestors : these officers were to administer it for three years and then to take rank as praetors, without passing through the otherwise necessary stages of the aedileship and tribunate.

Under Nero the office was again held by praefecti, named by the emperor himself from the praetorii: and after his death, by praetores, as the present passage shows. Finally, Nerva or Trajan restored the Neronian system.

5. reservabat, 'was in favour of reserving it.'

6. perrogarent, sc. asking each senator for his vote: cp. Liv. xxix. 19, perrogari eo die sententiae non potuerunt.

12. oblivio looks much more like an ablative than a nominative: and is better taken as the former case, although it is true that the singular form oblivium is nowhere else found, and even the plural generally in poetry. Madvig and Nipperdey would read oblivione.

meminissent: some remembered Helvidius' proposal—by which Vespasian would only have played a secondary part in the restoration—and informed the emperor of it.

X.

1. P. Celerem, P. Egnatius Celer; v. A. xvi. 32, and Juv. iii. 116, Stoicus occidit Barea delator, amicum | discipulumque senex, ripa nutritus in illa | ad quam Gorgonei delapsa est pinna caballi. Tac. describes him as a kind of Tartufe: habitu et ore ad exprimendam honesti imaginem exercitus, ceterum animo perfidiosus, subdolanus, avaritiam ac libidinem occultans. He was a native of Berytus (or Tarsus, according to Juvenal).

3. ea cognitione, etc.: sc. although the prosecution was thought to be an unadvisable reopening of old wounds, still no one sympathised with Celer. Under the empire the senate could try criminal cases, especially such as concerned members of its own body: cp. for instance the case of Libo in A. ii. and Piso in A. iii. In such trials the form of the ordinary praetor's court was really preserved: the consul represented the presiding praetor, and the senate the judex or judices.

7. proditor corruptorque, etc.: 'had betrayed and outraged that friendship which he professed to teach.'

8. dies, sc. day of meeting: cp. 40, when the case actually comes on.

XI.

7. offensis, 'strained relations.'

8. nec deerat: v. i. 23, note.

10. incessu, here, not 'gait,' but mien or behaviour in general.

11. nomen remittere, 'while he did not claim the title'; cp. iii. 58, remisit.

12. C. Pisonis, who had conspired against Nero: A. xv. 48.

15, 16. qui princ. inanem ei famam circumdarent, 'talked idly of his elevation to the throne': cp. Dial. 37, hanc illi famam circumdederunt: and Greek phrases such as περιθῆναι τινι ἀριπλᾶν.

20. Priscus: ii. 92: A. Varus, iii. 36. They had deserted the forces under their command at Narnia (61).

23. Asiaticus: cp. ii. 57 and 95.

24. servilli supplicio; sc. he was crucified. Cp. ii. 72.

XII.

1, 2. crebrescentem famam: the revolt is first mentioned iii. 46.

2. nequaquam maesta: because the defeats of the forces in Germany deprived the Vitellians of their last hope.

4. loquebantur is used with an object accusative also in i. 50.

5. externarum: Cicero would say externi mores, but externae gentes.

6, 7. altius expediam: a poetical phrase borrowed perhaps from Virgil.

Cp. Georg. iv. 286, altius omnem expediam prima repetens ab origine famam.

8. Chattorum, on whom v. Germ. 30, 31. They seem to have been settled somewhere near the modern Waldeck, about the Eder and Werra. They were skilled in the arts of war: Tac. says of them (1. c.) alios ad praelium ire videas, Chattos ad bellum.

8, 9. extrema Gallicae orae, the left bank of the Waal and Meuse, down to the sea.

9, 10. insulam iuxta sitam. This is the insula Batavorum described by Tac. A. ii. 6: the delta bounded on the north by the Rhine, on the south by the Waal and Meuse. There is a picturesque description of the Batavi and their early settlements in the first pages of Motley's Dutch Republic.

11. Rhenus amnis; more properly Rhenus et Vahalus.

tergum ac latera following quam are accusatives of closer definition, a Greek construction : cf. τῶας τῶμος αἰὼς ἐπήλυθε γυῖα ἕκαστον.

12. opibus, etc. M has opibus Romanis, societate validiorum.

14. per Britanniam. In 61 A.D. eight Batavian cohorts were serving in Britain under Suetonius Paulinus (A. xiv. 38): these are the octo Batavorum cohortes quartae decimae legionis auxilia, alluded to as being in Gaul H. i. 59.

16. erat, etc. The infinitive depends on nandi studio; swimmers so keen as to cross, etc. Dübner notices the similar French use of the infinitive: nageurs à passer, etc. It is possible to punctuate after eques and make perrumpere historic infinitive.

XIII.

1. Civills : v. Introd.

2. F. Capito : governor of Lower Germany in 68 : cp. i. 7. 58.

3. falso rebellionis crimine, perhaps on the occasion of Vindex' rising in Gaul.

5. discrimen adiit : cp. i. 59, Julius deinde Civilis periculo exemptus, praepotens inter Batavos, ne supplicio ejus ferox gens alienaretur (a causa Vitellii).

7. ultra quam barbaris solitum : cp. ii. 91, note. For the dative cp. 3, solita principibus.

This long string of epithets and dependent clauses would in English resolve itself probably into three separate sentences, as there is no real logical connection between its several parts.

9. dehonestamento : he had lost an eye, like Hannibal and Sertorius.

12. Antonii litteris : cp. 32, lectae pro contione epistolae Antonii ad Civilem suspiciones militum irritavere, tamquam ad socium partium scriptae et de Germ. exercitu hostiliter. v. 26, hoc Antonio notum, cujus epistulis ad bellum actus sum.

13. accita : cp. ii. 97.

tumultus properly means a war in Italy or Cisalpine Gaul: that this was the early meaning of the word Cicero expressly says, Phil. 8. 3. Yet even in Cicero's time it was gradually coming into use to describe a war against invaders of any part of the Roman dominions : ad Fam. xv. 1, he speaks of magnus tumultus in provincia Syria excitatus.

15. H. Flaccus, governor of Upper Germany (i. 9). Vitellius had charged him with the defence of the Rhine bank (ii. 57).

17, 18. adventabat, si ... inrupissent: was approaching and would have actually come had the legions reached Italy. cp. iii. 46, excindere parabant ni Mucianus sextam legionem opposuisset, and Cic. Leg. i. 19. labebar longius nisi me retinuissem.

17. si redintegratum, sc. esset: cp. note on i. 21 (dum Galbae auctoritas fluxa).

XIV.

1. desciscendi certus: cp. e.g. A. iv. 34, relinquendae vitae certus: perhaps an imitation of Aen. iv. 554, certus eundi.

2. altiore consilio. It seems probable that Civilis aimed at something more than the restoration of Batavian independence, from 17, validissimarum ditissimarumque nationum regno imminebat, and 61, si certandum adversus Gallos de possessione rerum foret.

5. onerabant, 'made it more oppressive': cp. a similar use of the word, ii. 52.

6. rursus, 'besides,' as in i. 1, rursus odio.

7. inpubes, as iii. 25, inpubem: earlier writers would say impuberes.

11. specie epularum: cp. Germ. 22, de pace ac bello plerumque in conviviis consultant.

12, 13. nocte ac laetitia, hendiadys: 'the revelry of the evening.' Cp. A. xiii. 15, nox et lascivia. Aen. i., munera laetitiamque dei.

15. societatem, abstract for concrete, = neque enim socios se esse.

16. quando legatum, etc., sc. they were never even honoured by the presence of a legatus (though even then the honour was balanced by the concomitant tyranny). The imperial provinces were governed by legati Caesaris pro praetore.

18. praeffectis: districts within imperial provinces were administered by praefecti: cp. A. iv. 72, Olenius e primipularibus regendis Frisiis impositus.

19. novos sinus, etc.: they still devised new pockets to fill, and different names to justify robbery. On sinus cp. ii. 9? note on ambitiosos sinus.

21. velut supremum = to meet no more: lit., as though for the last time; the recruit bids farewell to his family as though to the dead. Cp. Aen. iii. 68, magna supremum voce ciemus. For the adverbial use of the neuter, cp. A. iii. 26, aeternum mansere.

23. senes, of course an exaggeration: cp. ii. 57, pauci veterum militum in hibernis relict. It is not likely that any of the rank and file were old men, properly speaking.

24. inania legionum nomina, either = legions which are so only in name, or "legions crippled by the vacancies in their ranks" (lit., the vacancies of the legions), in which case nomina is used in the same technical way as in ii. 57, ut legionum nomina supplerentur.

The first rendering is the best: more especially since, as a matter of fact, the vacancies in the ranks had been filled up (cp. 15, segnem numerum armis oneraverat), only they were filled by raw recruits. Vitellius had taken 40,000 men from the army of the Lower Rhine alone when marching to Italy: cp. i. 61.

25. pavescerent: cp. iii. 56, vulnus pavens.

27. ne R. quidem: that is, the Flavian party, who would be glad to see the attention of the Vitellian legions distracted.

cuius ambiguam, etc. The sense is: should the Batavians be worsted (ambig. fort. is meiosis for 'failure'), at least they could make a merit of the service they attempted to render Vespasian. Should they succeed, their independence would be vindicated, and they need give an account of their actions to no one. The subject of imputaturos (on which v. l. 38, note) is Batavos understood; some make it Romanos, which gives no satisfactory sense. Thierry (Histoire des Gaulois 3) renders the passage: Vaincus, nous en ferons un mérite auprès de Vespasien; vainqueurs, qui viendra nous demander des comptes?

XV.

2. patriis execrationibus. According to Grimm's Deutsche Rechtsalterthümer (quoted by Orelli), anything was good enough for a German to swear by; they swore per deos, per sancta pignora, per humum, gramen, arbores, aquas, fontes, fluvios, montes, rupes, lapides, pectus, barbam, capillos, caput, vestimenta, plerumque per arma et praecipue gladium.

adigit. Execrationibus takes the place of the sacramento or jurejurando, which usually follows this word.

3. Canninefates, whose settlements were W. of those of the Batavians, in the lower part of the insula, and also on the N. bank of the Rhine. They are mentioned as serving in the Roman army, A. iv. 73. In inscriptions the name is usually Cannunefates.

6. Britannica auxilla: the eight Batavian cohorts sent away from Ticinum (ii. 69): they had served in Britain. Cp. note on per Britanniam (12).

7. Mogontiacum, Mainz.

10, 11. Gaiantarum expeditionum: cp. Germ. 37, ingentes Gai Caesaris minae in ludibrium versae; Agr. 13, ni ingentes adversus Germaniam conatus (Gai Caesaris) frustra fuissent. Suet. Cal. 43-47. According to the story, as a finale to his expedition, Caligula halted his army in full battle array on the sea-coast of N. Germany, and ordered them to pick up shells as trophies.

12, 13. inpositus scuto: an ancient German custom, in vogue also among the Franks and Goths, and in late imperial times among the Romans. Zosimus (3. 9. 4) says it was practised at the election of Julian; ἐπὶ τινος ἀσπίδος μετέωρον ἀπαντες ἀντρέπον σεβαστὸν αὐτοκράτορα.

15. cohortium: prob. of Gallic auxiliaries, acc. to 17.

occupatum: M occupata. Other readings are occupatu and accubantia Oceano.

16. Oceano, 'by way of the ocean,' i.e. along the coast. Cp. i. 61, Cottianis Alpibus Italiam inrumpere.

20, 21. excidiis castellorum imminabant, 'threatened the destruction of the forts.'

22. signa vexillaque: each manipule had a signum, while the cohort had a vexillum. Cp. the same expression ii. 18.

26. Nerviorum, a people settled on the banks of the Sambre, in the modern provinces of Hennegau and Namur. Acc. to Germ. 28, they claimed a German origin.

Germanorumque is reading in M, but does not look right: hence Her. reads Tungrorum (the people about Tongres), as they are afterwards mentioned.

XVI.

1. ultro, sc. he was not content with mere neutrality, but actually professed to take up arms for the Romans. Cp. i. 7, note.

3. cui praeerat : the indicative is used because the parenthesis is Tacitus' explanation, not Civilis' : v. Dräger. 151.

10. parum cessere, 'failed of their object.'

11. propriis cuneis : i.e. the contingents of various nationalities were not mixed, but ranked separately on the field.

So in 23, Batavi Transrhenanique ... sibi quaeque gens consistunt.

According to Vegetius the technical military meaning of cuneus is a wedge-shaped column ; but Tacitus probably uses it here and elsewhere for columnar—as opposed to line—formation in general.

12. ex diverso, 'opposite to him' : cp. 3. 5.

haud procul, etc. The battle doubtless took place in the eastern part of the insula : cp. 15, in superiorem partem insulae congregantur. The Roman ships were either in the Rhine or the Waal (for Tacitus speaks of both branches as Rhenus amnis in 12), with their prows facing the enemy : when the engagement had begun, the Batavian crews overpowered their Roman comrades and ran the vessels ashore on the part of the bank which was held by Civilis' forces (hostili ripae obicere).

13. et co-ordinates the ablative of attendant circumstances with the adverbial haud procul in flumine Rheno : cp. A. xv. 12, interritus et parte copiarum apud Suriam relictus.

14. nec goes with the participle, not with the finite verb : cp. note on i. 71, and neque enim ambigue fremebant, 24.

18. officia : cp. A. ii. 23, officia prudentium corrumpere.

19. contra tendere, 'actively opposed them.' The phrase occurs several times in Tac. : cp. i. 28, si contra tenderet exitium metuens.

22. donec : cp. iii. 27, note.

XVII.

2. usui = utilis. Notice the chiasmic form of the sentence.

8. data potestate = dando potestatem : the action of the ablative is not strictly prior to that of the main verb. Cp. i. 2, urbs incendiis vastata, consumptis antiquissimis delubris.

13, 14. quamquam expertes : cp. iii. 2, note on quamquam rebus adversis.

17, 18. ne Vindicis aciem cogitarent, sc. let them not think that they should be warned by the failure of Vindex (cogitare here = ἐνθυμείσθαι, ἐνθύμιον ποιείσθαι). For the allusion v. Introd. to Books 1 and 2.

18. Aeduos, between the upper Loire and the Saône.

19. Arvernus, in Auvergne. Vindex was supported by the Sequani in addition to the two last-named tribes.

Verginii : v. Introd. to Books 1 and 2.

Belgas, Treveri and Lingones (69). Tac. says (i. 8) that Galba refused the communities of Eastern Gaul certain privileges granted to the others, and even mulcted some of part of their territory : so that here the seeds of discontent would be already sown.

20. reputantibus = si quis reputaret : cp. note on the same word, ii. 50.

21. easdem omnium partes, 'they were all on the same side.'

23. cohortes, the eight Batavian cohorts above mentioned.

quibus : cp. A. i. 59, sibi tres legiones procubuisse; dat. on analogy perhaps of abl. with a or simple abl. after intrans. verbs like cadere, cp. Penelei dextra procumbit, Aen. ii. 425; ab hoste caderet, Suet. Oth. 5. Cp. ἀποθανεῖν ὑπὸ τινος.

nuper, April 69, at the first battle of Bedriacum : ii. 43.

25. suetus regibus : cp. ii. 32, aut Italiae sueta aut aestibus.

multos adhuc, etc., of course an exaggeration : it was 95 years since the last census of Gaul, in Augustus' seventh consulship.

26. nuper certe caeso Q. Varo, about 60 years before. Nuper is thus a little surprising, more especially as it is used a few lines back to describe an event of the same year : but it is a word of rather loose signification, and denotes a less degree of nearness in time than modo. Cp. Cicero, De Natura Deorum, 2. 50, Nuper, id est paucis ante saeculis.

31. proinde : cp. note on i. 21.

vacui occupatos, 'while your hands are free and theirs are tied' by the civil war. Rome's difficulty was the Batavian's opportunity.

33. patere locum adversus utrumque, 'they had an opportunity of acting against both.'

XVIII.

1, 2. in Gallias intentus, 'giving all his thoughts to Gaul,' i.e. trying to bring it to his side: cp. 51, in Italiam resque urbis intentus.

6. dissimulationem, 'pretended ignorance': cp. 24, dissimulatos Civilis conatus.

8. Romanum nomen = Romanos, as often in Livy; and cp. A. i. 43, subvenisse Romano nomini. So Latinum nomen is the regular term for those possessing Latin rights.

9. Mun. Lupercum, perhaps commander of the 15th legion, as Fabius Valens was probably legatus of the 5th, the greater part of which had gone to Italy with Vitellius. Cp. i. 61.

10. duarum legionum, 5th and 15th.

hibernis, at Vetera.

12. Ubios, whose capital was now Colonia Agrippinensis (Köln), so called in honour of the younger Agrippina; v. note on 28; (temp. Caesar on R. bank).

Treverorum, on the Mosel, in Gallia Belgica: their capital was Augusta Treverorum (Trier).

13. transmisit, over the Waal to the insula.

15. maiore pretio fugeret, 'their desertion might be the more profitable.'

17. ante oculos, sc. esset: cp. note on i. 21. The Bipontine ed. reads ante oculos esset, hostes, etc.; but the correction is hardly necessary.

19. hortamenta, etc. The practice of placing the women near the army seems to have been common to the Germans, Britons, and Thracians: cp. Germ. 7, A. xiv. 34, iv. 51. On the accusatives in apposition to the sentence (for this is the construction at least of pudorem), cp. note on i. 44 (munimentum ad praesens).

20. cantu, cp. cantu truci, ii. 22. This war-song is called in Germ. 3 baritus or barditus, of which Tacitus says, nec tam vocis ille quam virtutis concentus videtur.

22. nudaverat: the pluperf. expresses immediate action: cp. note on ii. 73.

24. quamquam: v. on iii. 2.

29. Veterum: for the genit. cp. A. xiv. 50, libri quibus codicillorum nomen dederat. Generally Tacitus uses the nominative in such sentences as the present, the predicative dative apparently only in the case of adjectives (v. Nipperdey on A. ii. 16).

The camp of Vetera was near the modern Xanten, on the left bank of the Rhine below Wesel: said to have been on the Fürstenberg.

30. Claudius Labeo: the popularity of the emperor Claudius in the Rhenish and Gallic provinces is proved by the frequent occurrence of his name: cp. 33, Claudius Victor; 62, Claudius Sanctus; 49, Claudius Sagitta; v. 22, Claudia Sacrata (all provincials from Gaul or the Rhine).

oppidano, etc., 'a townsman and rival,' or 'a jealous townsman' of Civilis. The Germans have a literal translation of oppidanus, 'kleinstädtisch': in English we have no exact equivalent for it. 'Provincial,' with its added connotation of something 'borné,' not in touch with the world in general, approaches the meaning; but it is not the same thing.

31. aemulus Civilis: the adj. or subst. is followed by a dative on the same principle as in Greek an adj. can sometimes even govern an accusative, e.g. ἀπορα πρόμιος: cp. note on i. 22, Othoni comes.

XIX.

2. cohortes: it will be remembered that Vitellius had sent the Batavian cohorts from Ticinum back to Mogontiacum, and subsequently sent a message to recall them to Italy in order to assist him against Vespasian (ii. 97). In obedience to this order they had set out for Mogontiacum southwards, when they were overtaken by the messenger sent to them by Civilis, (cp. 15).

5, 6. duplex stipendium: troops of the line seem to have received in the first century A.D. 10 asses, i.e., if the denarius is calculated at 16 asses, about 5d. Cp. A. i. 17 (v. Nipperdey, ad loc.). According to the latter passage the praetorians received 2 denarii (1s. 5d.) per diem.

6. augeri equitum numerum: so that more of the infantry should pass into the cavalry and thus receive higher pay.

8. causam seditioni: cp. note on initium bello, i. 67. Notice the change between the accusative in apposition and the final clause.

10, 11. inferiorem Germaniam: this province extended southwards as far as the Nava (Nahe), which joins the Rhine at Bingen.

14. ignavia: on his character, v. i. 9, 56.

ministris, 'his subordinates.'

15. subito dilectu, etc., sc. they saw with alarm the incapacity of the hastily recruited battalions.

16. intra castra: the 4th and 22nd legions were at Mogontiacum, the first at Bonna (Bonn), the 16th at Novaesium (Neuss), the 15th and 5th at Vetera.

17. paenitentia et arguentibus: a co-ordination of ablatives of different kinds, as 68, ferocia aetatis et pravis impulsoribus.

17, 18. tamquam secuturus: a construction sufficiently common in Tac., though in most cases he uses tamquam with the subjunctive.

19. Bonnam: the Roman camp was to the north of the town, near Wichelshof.

20. transitu, sc. from marching along the Rhine bank past Bonn.

21. et, 'and no doubt.'

---

XX.

5. irrita, because of the refusal to comply with their demand for double pay, etc.

Tac. often uses infin. after verbs of causation and compulsion, adigere, illicere, mandare, even scribere (to send written orders to), etc. Cp. ii. 46.

9, 10. tumultuariæ, 'hastily collected.'

10. Belgarum, i.e. Nervii and Tungri (15, 16).

13. veteres militiæ: cp. A. i. 20, vetus operis ac laboris.

14. frontem, etc. = a fronte: acc. of respect.

19. ruina et suis telis, perhaps hendiadys = in sua tela ruendo.

22, 23. sibimet ipsis consuluisse, 'had only acted in self-defence.'

---

XXI.

1, 2. iusti exercitus, 'a regular army.'

10, 11. arbitrium rerum R. ne ageret, 'pretend to decide the destinies of Rome': cp. A. xiii. 14, arbitrium regni agebat; Liv. xlv. 15, arbitria belli pacisque agere.

14. Bructëri, between the Lippe and Ems. Tenctëri, between Rhine, Lippe, and Ruhr. Cp. A. xiii. 56.

XXII.

1. concurrentis, undique ingruentis, 'gathering.'
2. N. Rufus, perhaps legatus of the 16th legion: at least its soldiers put Herennium et Numisium legatos under arrest in ch. 56. It does not appear why he was at Vetera, if this is so.
3. longae pacis opera, that is, the buildings surrounding the camp, procestria; shops of negotiatores and licae, etc.
The Roman stativa castra thus in many cases was the nucleus of a town: many English communities doubtless owe their origin to this.
4. in modum municipii: cp. i. 67, locus in modum municipii exstructus. The meaning is only that the buildings formed a little town: we need not lay stress on the technical meaning of municipium.
5. copiae, 'provisions': cp. i. 66, promiscuis copiis.
6. rapi: sub. copias.
8. in longum = diu: cp. 79, nec in longum quies militi data. It is a phrase of the silver age.
- 8, 9. medium agmen: Civilis advanced by the military road up the left bank, while the catervae Germanorum moved parallel with him on both sides of the river.
12. in adversum amnem, more commonly adverso amne.
14. ferarum imagines; each tribe we may suppose had its special totem. Cp. Germ. 7, effigies et signa quaedam detracta lucis in proclium ferunt.
17. duabus leg. situm: built, made by two legions (cp. note on situm, iii. 72), and so capable of containing 12,000 men.
18. armatorum Romanorum, distinguished from negotiatores who would be Roman perhaps, but unarmed, while licae, who might be armed, were generally non-Roman.
19. congregata et bello ministra, two co-ordinated attributes, but referring to different points of time: cp. A. xv. 51, lentitudinis eorum pertaesa et in Campania agens (= in C. agens quia lentitudinis eorum pertaesa erat).

XXIII.

1. in collem leniter exsurgens = on the gentle slope of a hill: cp. Caes. Bk. ix. 7. 19, collis erat leniter ab infimo acclivis. Sometimes Tac. uses clementer in this sense.

2. obsideri, 'held in check': the camp was to be a base for offensive operations against Germany: the Romans did not expect to have to stand on the defensive. On ultra, v. 1. 7.

6. labor additus, sc. no labour had been expended on fortifications: cp. Georg. i. 150, mox et frumentis labor additus.

arma satis placebant appears to be equivalent to arma satis esse placuit (or videbatur).

8. sibi quaeque, for pro se quaeque: = propriis cuneis (16). Cp. i. 13, sibi quisque tententes.

15. nimil, 'uncontrollable,' or 'extravagant,' used here absolutely: generally it is followed by a word of limitation, as 80, nimius commemorandis quae meruisset, iii. 75, nimius sermonis.

sed tum is closely connected with adversa quoque, as opposed to rebus secundis: they were always uncontrollable in the hour of victory, and now even battled against overwhelming difficulty.

17. insolitum sibi: cp. a bolder use of the reflexive, i. 64, cohortes Lugduni, solitis sibi hibernis, relinqui placuit.

nec = sed non: cp. nec ausi, 26.

18. struere materias in modum pontis: the pons is apparently a moveable tower with some kind of bridge or platform jutting out from it: some stand on this bridge, while their comrades in the tower try to batter down the defences of the camp.

materias = wood for building: for the pl. cp. v. 20, caedendis materiis.

22. crates vineasque, cp. ii. 21.

23. tormentis, a generic term: the proper word would probably be catapultae, which often threw burning missiles, such as falaricae.

24, 25. verterent consilium ad moras, 'they resolved on a policy of delay.'

XXIV.

3. e legionibus = the 4th and 22nd.

6. navibus: reading of M: al. pavidus.

invalidus, etc., gives the reason why Flaccus did not lead the land force himself: he was ill and unpopular with his soldiers. Cp. i. 9, where he is spoken of as suffering from the gout.

7. emissas, 'allowed to go.'

16. proditore : M traditore.

17, 18. his inter se vocibus : the adverbial expression takes the place of some adjective like mutuis : cp. 37, magnis in vicem cladibus ; i. 65, multae in vicem clades.

---

XXV.

2. illic, sc. qui illic agebat : cp. v. 14, memoria prosperarum illic rerum.

5, 6. supervenientibus : the word is used of a force arriving on the field in the middle of the engagement like the Prussians at Waterloo. Cp. 54, superventu legionis caesi victores. For the facts cp. 19, 20.

8. repens, a Tacitean word : other authors use repentinus.

9. exemplares, instead of the common form, exemplaria : cp. Fronto, ep. ad Antonium ii. 5, exemplares eorum excerptorum nullos feci.

11. instituit pessimum facinus, 'introduced the vile practice of,' etc.

epistulae, of course letters written to the general.

12. aquiliferis, because the letters were intended to be read before the signa in the principia, the general meeting-place of the soldiers : cp. Spartian, Pescennius Niger 4, missi litteras recitandas ad signa.

14, 15. usurpandi iuris, 'to vindicate his right,' for the principle of the thing. On the gen. expressing purpose v. note on secretum componendae prodicionis, ii. 100.

19. arma sumpserunt : M arma, hence Orelli reads armatae, Dübner and Rupert armari.

28. optimus quisque jussis paruere. Tac. uses the pl. after quisque with a superl. in several passages ; but the sing. as a rule.

29. summam rerum, 'the chief command' : v. note on iii. 70.

XXVI.

3, 4. incognita illi caelo siccitate : as the Germany of Tacitus' time was a country of immense forests and comparatively little cultivation, its climate was of course far more humid than at present. Cp. A. i. 56, nam rarum illi caelo siccitate et amnibus modicis inoffensum iter properaverat: Germ. 5, aut silvis horrida aut paludibus foeda, umida, qua Gallias, ventosior, qua Noricum ac Pannoniam aspicit.

4. arti commeatus, 'the difficulty of obtaining supplies'; cp. iii. 13, in arto commeatus.

9. vetera imperii munimenta: the Rhine, Danube, and Euphrates were all frontiers of the empire: cp. A. i. 9, mari Oceano aut amnibus longinquis saeptum imperium.

10. fors seu natura: so when Otho was leaving Rome the flooding of the via Flaminia "a fortuitis vel naturalibus causis in profligium et omen imminentium cladum vertebatur" (i. 86).

12. Novaesium, Neuss, on the Erft: in Tacitus' time on the Rhine bank, though the modern town is nearly two miles distant from the river.

sextadecuma, not the entire legion, as it had sent a  vexillum  to Italy with Vitellius. There were sextadecumani present at the battle near Cremona described iii. 22: whence the conjectural reading in ii. 100, vexilla primae, quartae, quintae decumae, sextae decumae legionum.

14. Gallus legatus of the 1st legion.

15. Gelduba, Gelb, between Kaiserswerth and Ürdingen: the village is said to stand on high ground, well adapted for a camp. It is about 10 miles from Neuss. Al. loco cui Gelduba nomen est.

17. belli meditamentis, 'military preparations': cp. nomina summae curae et meditamenta, A. xv. 35; and H. iii. 2, meditatio belli.

19. Cugernorum, said to be the descendants of those Sugambri whom Tiberius in 8 B.C. transferred to the left bank of the Rhine (Suet. Tib. 9). Their neighbours on the north were the Batavi and on the south the Ubii: at least this is rendered probable by Plin. N. H. iv. 17, Ubii, Guberni (sic), Batavi. The name is said to be preserved in that of the modern village of Goch.

20, 21. pars cum H. Gallo remansit: apparently an imprudent separation in face of the strong army of Civilis.

XXVII.

5. acie certatum, 'there was a pitched battle.'

8. legati, H. Galli.

11. illum, Hordeonium, who was at Novaesium: hunc, Gallum.

16. tanta illi exercitui, etc., 'of such opposite extremes of licence and submission were they capable.'

19, 20. mixtus obsequio furor, 'discipline alternated with insubordination.' The general sense seems to be that the two parties were so evenly balanced that each gained an alternate ascendancy.

XXVIII.

2. nobilissimis obsidum may perhaps mean 'hostages of good family': cp. paucis resistentium, iii. 12, which according to Heräus means 'a few who resisted': v. note on iii. 73.

5. Menapios, in Gallia Belgica, between the Maas and Scheld, south of the Batavians.

Morinos, south of the Menapii, about St. Omer and Boulogne. Virgil (Aen. viii. 727) calls them extremi hominum; cp. Plin. N. H. xix. 2, ultimi hominum existimati Morini.

7, 8. Romanorum nomen, M; others read Romano nomine. For the antecedents of the Ubii v. Germ. 28, where they are said to have transgressi olim et experimento fidei super ipsam Rheni ripam collocati, ut arcerent, non ut custodirentur.

9. Marcoduro, Düren, on the Roer, south of Jülich.

10, 11. quominus, instead of quin.

11. primo inpune, etc. Notice the change from the subordinate adverbial phrase to a clause with a principal verb: v. note on 2.

14. legionum, the troops shut up at Vetera.

17. molem operum means 'the construction of the works,' according to Heräus, who compares A. i. 75, mole publicae viae; but I should doubt the possibility of this meaning. Probably mole viae means the weight or mass of the road, and motes operum the difficult task of constructing the works, —lit. the difficulty of the works.

19, 20. superante multitudine, i.e. there were plenty to spare: cp. the same phrase Liv. v. 21. This sense is rendered necessary by the following, et facili damno: although it is otherwise rendered 'in face of the enemy's numerical superiority.'

XXIX.

2. simul epulantes, ἄμα δειπνούντες.

6. insignia, ornaments. Cp. 46, suis cum insignibus armisque.

7. misceri cuncta, etc.; lit. bade all be confounded in darkness and the din of arms, 'add the confusion of darkness to their attack.' Cp. the description in Thuc. iii. 23 of the nocturnal sally of the besieged Plataeans.

8, 9. concursum incerti: M has corsus incerti, written in the margin. Casus is more probable, though concursum makes better sense.

10, 11. tendere artus: M has arcus, which seems improbable. Orelli suggests acrius.

11. fors cuncta turbare, 'chance ruled the chaos.'

15. molientium, sc. attempting to scale the rampart: cp. note on molientes, ii. 35.

XXX.

2. praetoriae portae. This gate adjoined the praetorium (quarters of the commanding officer and his staff), and was commonly on that side of the camp which was nearest to the enemy or was supposed most likely to be threatened: here this would be the west side, where the ground adjacent to the camp is a low plateau, gradually descending to the Niers, a tributary of the Meuse. The porta decumana on the east side faced the Rhine: the river would make an attack from this quarter less probable.

8. suspensum et nutans machinamentum, 'a crane balanced and ready to descend.' What is meant is a tolleno, or balanced beam with a rising and falling or seesaw movement: one arm would be within the camp while the other projected over the rampart. This latter arm, furnished with a hook, was lowered into the midst of the besiegers, and having captured one or more of them was raised again by the weighting of the other end of the beam (verso pondere, lit. by the shifting of the weight): and apparently in its upward course it so swung round as to deposit its victims within the camp. An age of Gatlings and Nordenfeldts finds it hard to realize the 'terror' inspired by this incredibly clumsy device!

Vegetius (iv. 21) says, 'Tolleno dicitur quotiens una trabes in terram praecalte defigitur, cui in summo vertice alia transversa trabes longior dimensa medietate connectitur, eo libramento, ut si unum caput depresseris, aliud erigatur.'

11. expugnandi: M has obpugnandi, which is probably right, although the sense is not quite so good.

13. convellens, 'endeavouring to undermine.'

XXXI.

1. ante Cremonense proelium, thus before the end of October, 69. (So far Civilis is besieging Vetera, Vocula and Herennius are at Gelduba, Flaccus at Novaesium.)

3. Caecinae edicto, sc. consulari: published probably at Cremona. No doubt it urged the army to follow the example of the consul and change sides.

4. Alpinus Montanus: cp. iii. 35.

6, 7. quis militia sine adfectu, 'who had no heart in their service.'

10, 11. non vultu neque animo satis adfirmans, 'without show or feeling of sincerity.'

11, 12. iuris iur. verba conciperent, 'repeated the formula of the oath'; concepta verba means a prescribed form of words, and concipere verba is apparently used in the sense of repeating such a form: cp. 41, senatus inchoantibus primoribus jus iurandum concepit.

12. Vespas. nomen, etc. The sentence contains a zeugma: with haesitantes and levi murmure some word like pronuntiabant must be supplied.

XXXII.

6, 7. externa armis falsis velaret: sc. conceal hostility to the empire under the mask of fighting for Vespasian.

9. ubi videt: for the historic present in a subordinate clause, cp. ubi ... videt, ii. 4, postquam ... videt, iv. 57.

12. exhausisset: cp. sic exhausta nocte ('the night having been passed in this way'), 29.

13. recepti, 'I have received as payment,' 'as a due': cp. note on reddebat, iii. 68.

14. fratris, Pauli: cp. 13.

vincula: cp. 13. and i. 59.

16, 17. servientium animae, 'servile souls': animae seems to imply that the Treveri are regarded only as so many lives at the Romans' disposal. There is the same idea in Virgil, Aen. xi. 372, nos animae viles, inhumata infletaque turba sternamur campis.

19. dominorum ingenia, 'the humours, caprices of your masters.'

21. Gallorum: in this appeal to a Gallic tribe Civilis keeps out of sight the German origin of the Batavians (on which v. 12).

23, 24. victi idem erimus, 'if defeated we shall be no worse off than before.'

25. ut inritus legationis, 'as if from a bootless errand,' ἀπρακτος; v. Dräger, 71.

XXXIII.

4. rapiunt = raptim capiunt, 'storm.'

5. alae, a body of auxiliary cavalry.

Asciburgii, between Vetera and Gelduba: either Asberg, near Mörs, about two miles from the Rhine, or Essenberg.

7. ut in tumultu, lit. 'as was natural or possible in the confusion': sc. the only command which the confusion allowed him to give, was, etc.

8. subsignano militi, sc. the legionaries: cp. note on subsignanum, i. 71.

10. terga in suos vertit, a pregnant phrase for terga vertit et in suos se recepit. From its frequent use to denote the first movement of a retreat the phrase comes to include the whole process. Cp. castra in hostem movit (34), a similarly pregnant expression.

15. sternebantur, the impf. denotes that the legionaries 'were in a fair way to be crushed.'

16. Vasconum, Basques, occupying the north-east part of Hispania Tarraconensis, and the adjoining frontier territory of Gaul. It will be remembered that Galba was governor of Hispania Tarraconensis.

18. intentos, sc. intent on fighting.

19. quam pro numero, 'than their numbers warranted': cp. the same phrase v. 13.

21. addit animos: i.e. to the Romans: Her. inserts Romanis.

24. prima acie, 'at the beginning of the engagement.'

26. ipsa robora, as the force was composed of veteranae cohortes et quod e Germanis maxime promptum.

XXXIV.

2. prosperis defuere, 'abused their success': cp. ne temporis deessent, 'not to waste the opportunity,' below. For the pl. cp. ii. 97. uterque ambigui.

3, 4. circumiri ... nequisset, sc. acies.

4. nec appears to stand for ne ... quidem: cp. A. iv. 34, sed neque haec in principem.

8. impellere here = to drive before him: cp. iii. 16, impulit ('drove in') Vitellianos.

cursum rerum sequi = to take advantage of his success.

10. tamquam perditae, sc. essent: cp. note on i. 21.

14. confossus: the participle has an aoristic sense (= et confossus est), as of course its action is subsequent to that of patefecit. Cp. i. 2, urbs incendiis vastata consumptis antiquissimis delubris (= et delubra consumpta sunt), and i. 20, note on relicta; and 17, data potestate.

illico: M, illic.

16. villarum, 'farmhouses' of the Cugerni (cp. 26).

17. castrorum, sc. Vetera.

20, 21. clamor pugnam poscentium: 'a cry for battle' would be the English phrase: cp. note on gaudentium impetu, i. 4.

23. proellum sumpsere, 'they joined battle,' for pr. commisere or suscipere, perhaps on the analogy of arma sumere: cp. bellum sumere (66).

nam gives the reason why the Germans were ready to fight, and thus why the Romans pr. sumpsere.

33. immane quantum: v. note on iii. 62.

34. omissis fugientium tergis, a picturesque equivalent for 'giving up pursuit': cp. v. 18, terga hostium promittens.

36. corrupta totiens victoria, 'by so often wasting his victory,' neglecting to make use of it. Thierry (Hist. iii. 402) translates: "Tant de victoires qu'il gâtait le firent soupçonner de vouloir éterniser la guerre." He might wish the war protracted, either because its end would terminate his own command, or because he was inclined to side with Vespasian, and saw that the continuation of hostilities was unfavourable to Vitellius.

XXXV.

5. potiebantur, 'were masters of': cp. note on potiente iii. 74.

primum agmen: apparently two separate parties were sent.

8, 9. multa pace: cp. iii. 71.

10. compositus = compositis ordinibus (33).

11. viarum angusta: as there could be no defiles properly so called in the country between Vetera and Gelduba, it is best to understand the words as synonymous with 'pontes' (cp. amnes et vetera imperii munimenta, 26): unless indeed virum angusta is a mere conventional item in the description of a march.

17. perculsis, 'demoralized.'

addit, etc. Vocula sets out to clear the way between Gelb and Xanten.

20, 21. iussum erat = the personal construction is almost always used by the older writers: Tac. often uses the impersonal: cp. iussum erat, v. 21.

23. desertos se. M. desertosque: whence Weissenborn, followed by Wolff, reads 'desertos se proditosque.'

XXXVI.

Vocula retires south because of the difficulty of keeping open communications along the river.

3. Civillis capit Geldubam is supposed an interpolated marginal explanation, on the ground that Civillis cannot be the subj. of the following verb certavit. But the difficulty is altogether imaginary. There is no reason why certavit should not refer to Civillis, as it is quite unnecessary to suppose that secundis in the next sentence has any relation to this clause: rather secunda would be the success gained by the Romans at Vetera: ch. 34.

6, 7. quintanorum quintadecumanorumque, the detachments which Vocula had brought from the garrison of Vetera (35).

14, 15. pudorem nox ademerat, 'darkness silenced the promptings of honour,' and gave the officers a convenient excuse for not defending their general.

16, 17. parabantur nisi ... evasisset: cp. iii. 46, parabant ni ... opposuisset, and iv. 13, adventabat, si ... inrupissent.

XXXVII.

6, 7. qui e superiore, sc. the men from the 4th and 22nd (Orelli 18th) legions despatched with Vocula: ch. 24.

7. causam suam dissociantibus, 'refusing to make common cause with them.'

8. in castris, i.e. in the principia.

9. cum iam Vit. occidisset: as Vit. was put to death Dec. 20, about two months have elapsed since the events of ch. 30 (cp. 31, haec ante Cremonense proelium gesta).

12, 13. Vesp. sacramento: for the gen. cp. sacramentum Galliarum (58).

13, 14. ad lib. Mogontiaci obsidium, instead of the more common constr. ad liberandum obsidione Mogontiacum. Liv. xxvi. 8 has ad Capuae liberandam obsidionem: cp. ii. 60, fidem absolvit.

15. Usipis Mattiacis. The Usipi or Usipetes inhabited the country between the Sieg and Lahn, south of the Tencteri, west of the Chatti: the settlements of the Mattiaci were between the Rhine, Main, and Lahn, in the neighbourhood of Wiesbaden (aquae Mattiacae). On the Chatti, v. 12.

17, 18. loricam vallumque, 'a parapet and rampart,' i.e. a rampart surmounted by a parapet. Orell. on A. iv. 49 defines lorica as "exiguum vallum et saepes ex cratibus aut saepis instar": cp. viminea lorica, Caes. B. G. viii. 9. Traces of a rampart are still to be seen, extending from Eich, near Andernach, past the Laacher See and into Luxemburg. If this is the vallum of the present passage, those are mistaken who suppose that per fines suos refers to the original territory of the Treveri, east of the Rhine.

18. per, 'along,' as in 24, per ripam.

XXXVIII.

1. iterum: he was consul suffectus under Claudius, 19 years before.

4. pavores induerat, lit. 'had clothed itself with,' and so was beset by, false alarms.

5. Pisone: said (I do not know on what authority) to be the son of L. Calpurnius Piso, cons. 57 (cp. A. xiii. 28, 31), and great-grandson of Cn. Piso, who was said to have poisoned Germanicus (A. ii.).

8. alimenta in dies mercari, 'to buy provisions from day to day,' and so live from hand to mouth.

9. annonae cura: cp. Juv. x. 80, duas tantum res anxius optat, Panem et Circenses. Africa was the principal granary of Rome; cp. Juv. v. 118, Tibi habe frumentum, Alledius inquit, O Libye, disjunge boves dum tubera mittas. Corn brought from Egypt and Africa was distributed to the poorest gratis, to others at a fixed low price.

XXXIX.

Tac.'s account is probably a combination of official records with oral tradition. Decretae, censuit, etc., are phrases from 'Hansard,' while information based on tradition is represented by imperfects such as audebat, etc. (Wolff).

1, 2. L. Frontinus, subsequently consul in 74, 75-8 governor of Britain, and curator aquarum under Nerva. He is the author of an extant work on tactics (Strategemata).

Notice that the praetor convokes the senate, in the absence of both consuls: cp. i. 47.

3. regibus: Sohaemus of Sophene and Emesa, Antiochus of Commagene, and Herod Agrippa of Chalcis and Trachonitis, v. notes on ii. 81.

3, 4. T. Iuliano, v. ii. 85: where it appears his crime was less political perfidy than escape from the attacks of a personal enemy.

6. Griphum: he had already taken Julianus' place as legatus of the 7th legion: cp. iii. 52, P. Griphum nuper a Vespasiano in senatorium ordinem adscitum ac legioni praepositum.

Hormo: cp. ii. 12, 28.

7. eiurante, 'resigning office': the word refers to the oath taken by out-going magistrates, that they had performed their duties loyally. Cp. A. xiii. 14, where eiurare is used absolutely, as here, and xii. 4, where it governs magistratum.

9. nisi quod, cp. iii. 28, Hormine id ingenium ... an potior auctor sit C. Plinius qui Antonium incusat, haud facile discreverim, nisi quod neque Ant. neque Hormus a fama vitae sua ... degeneravere. Here it is equivalent to 'although.'

11. propria libidine, cp. 2. Suet. Dom. 1, says of him, (praetor) omnem vim dominationis tam licenter exercuit ut iam tum qualis futurus esset ostenderet.

13, 14. recentes...fama, a kind of hendiadys : 'crowned with fresh laurels.' Orelli thinks that recentes means novi (in the well-known sense of parvenus) and Louandre translates hommes nouveaux. But the epithet would here be out of place, and moreover there seems to be no authority for this meaning of recentes.

16. S. Crassum, elder brother of Galba's adopted son, and so fraterna imagine fulgens (ennobled by his brother's distinctions); cp. i. 15, where Galba says to Piso, est tibi frater pari nobilitate, natu major, dignus hac fortuna nisi tu potior esses. There is a similar use of imago (the mask or bust of a member of the family, preserved in the atrium with a list of the various honores attached) in cessisti Galbae imaginibus (ii. 76).

19, 20. corrumpi facilis, instead of the Ciceronian facilis ad corrumperendum. The infin. indicates the sphere of action of the adjective : cp. Horace's celerem sequi and quidlibet impotens sperare.

20. adeo : v. note on i. 9.

23. Cl. Rufi : cp. notes on i. 8, and ii. 65, and note at end of Ed. of Bks. I. and II. From ii. 65 it appears that Cl. Rufus was retained near Vitellius' person but allowed at the same time to hold his governorship : we may suppose however that with the change of emperors his discessus had its natural result, and the province was without a governor.

24. tribunatus, sc. militum, apparently a lucrative post : cp. Juv. i. 58, cum fas esse putet curam sperare cohortis qui bona donavit praesepeibus, etc.

praefecturae, commands of auxiliary troops, praefecturae fabrorum, etc.

25. inanem animum, 'his vanity.'

26. in hiberna, in Pannonia : cp. ii. 86. The septima was the septima Galbiana.

28. tertia, Gallica : its headquarters were in Syria : cp. i. 10.

29. in Germanias, against Civilis.

30. egesto quidquid turbidum, 'after the removal of elements of disturbance.'

31. leges, i.e. the laws regained their authority.

XL.

4. oris confusio, sc. a trick of blushing. Domitian's complexion appears to have been noticeably ruddy : Tac. Agr. 45 speaks of saevus ille vultus et rubor, quo se contra pudorem muniebat: and Pliny (Paneg. 48) of his "shameless red face" (in ore impudentia multo rubore suffusa).

5. referente Caesare, i.e. Domitian, presiding as praetor urbanus in the absence of the consuls; v. iii. 86, note.

6. Montanus had published satires in Nero's reign which aroused the jealousy of the imperial poetaster. Accused by Epius Marcellus, he was pardoned by the emperor on the intercession of his father, but excluded from holding any public office (praedicto ne in republica haberetur): cp. Ann. xiv. 28, 29, 33. Under Domitian he seems to have attained a position of influence: Juv. iv. 107 mentions him as one of the amici or comites of the emperor, i.e. his favourites and advisers, composing a sort of ministry: Montani quoque venter adest abdomine pinguis.

10. delapsa: sc. fallen from the walls where they were fixed.

noscerent, 'examine, investigate': cp. A. i. 62, nullo noscente alienas reliquias an suorum humo tegerent.

11. fastos: it had been customary for the senate to decree the celebration of ludi and festivals in honour of various members of the imperial house, or even to name months after them: e.g. April was to be called after Nero, May after Claudius; A. xv. 74, xvi. 12. Institutions and changes of this kind would of course be entered in the fasti or state calendar.

12. modum publicis inpensis facerent, as had been already proposed (9).

14. honor mansit: he was allowed to retain the honorary rank of praetor.

18. privatim: sc. the proceedings of the day were creditable not only to the State but to an individual (Musonius).

20. diversa = contraria.

Demetrio, an intimate friend and the companion of the last moments of Thrasea, A. xvi. 34; so that his defence of P. Celer was inconsistent or even dishonourable. He was banished by Vespasian on the advice of Mucianus, who appears to have considered philosophers politically dangerous.

21. manifestum, used absolutely, as in A. xi. 6; earlier writers add some qualifying word denoting the crime.

24. I. Mauricus, brother of Arulenus Rusticus, v. iii. 80: he was banished by Domitian, but returned under Nerva.

Pliny says of him Junius Mauricus, quo viro nihil firminus, nihil verius (Ep. iv. 22).

25. comment. principalium, minutes of the imperial cabinet, but apparently regarded as State documents and not the property of the individual emperor: they would contain, inter alia, entries relating to applications for leave to prosecute. There are several mentions of such commentarii in the history of the early empire, from the comment. Caesaris of which we hear so much in Cicero's Philippics; cp. e.g. A. xiii. 43, eam orationem Caesar cohibuit, compertum sibi referens ex commentariis patris sui nullam cuiusquam accusationem ab eo coactam.

potestatem senatui faceret, 'render them accessible to the senate.'

27. tali super re: cp. 82, super rebus imperii. Cicero uses super in this sense once or twice, only in letters.

XLI.

1, 2. iusiurandum concepit means either 'framed a form of oath' or 'repeated a set form' (for which latter sense cp. 31 and note on conciperent): the second meaning best suits inchoantibus; the leading men were the first to take the oath.

2, 3. ceteri ut sententiam ... rogabantur: this may perhaps imply that magistratus from quaestors upwards gave their opinions without being asked by the presiding consul or praetor; v. Nipp. on A. iii. 17.

7, 8. probabant religionem etc. This is a difficult sentence, and has caused some difference of opinion among commentators. The best meaning hitherto suggested is, I think, that which approves itself to Orelli. According to his view the words refer to those quis flagitii conscientia inerat: the senate watched the embarrassment of these persons, and non sine quadam ironia gave them all praise for their well-meant but futile attempts to make the oath fit their consciences; but they held them for perjurers all the same. On the other hand, Heräus makes probabant ... arguebant a description of the whole ceremony: as each senator took the oath, the house applauded his good faith or protested against his perjury; and Burnouf also takes this view, translating les sénateurs applaudissaient à la bonne foi, protestaient contre le parjure. (So too Meiser in his ed. of Orelli's notes.)

9. eaque velut censura; i.e. the senators thus taking upon themselves the office of censors (whose business it was, inter alia, to purge the curia of bad characters) pronounced their severest verdict against Vocula, etc.

16. Scribonios fratres: Rufus and Proculus Scribonius were governors of Upper and Lower Germany respectively: Nero compelled them to commit suicide that he might make himself master of their wealth. Dio 63. 17 describes them as μηδὲν μηδέποτε ἀνευ ἀλλήλων πράξαντες, ἀλλ' ὥσπερ τῷ γένει οὕτω καὶ τῇ προαιρέσει τῇ τε οὐσίᾳ συμπεφυκότες—then giving the story of their end.

19. V. Crispum: v. ii. 10, note.

20, 21. miscendo quae defendere nequibat, 'by alleging Crispus' complicity in crimes which he himself could not deny.'

miscendo = communicando (cum Crispo).

XLII.

2. V. Messalla, v. iii. 9, note.

2, 3. senatoria aetate, which had been fixed by Augustus at 25.

3. M. Aquilius Regulus had been a noted delator in the reign of Nero. Amongst other victims he had brought about the condemnation—on the usual charge of maiestas—and death of two nobles, Licinius Crassus Frugi and Ser. Cornelius Orfitus.

After the death of Domitian, Regulus seems to have sunk into comparative obscurity, although still active enough for evil to be called by Pliny, Ep. 1. 5, Regulus omnium bipedum nequissimus.

6. sponte is followed in M by ex se, in another MS. by ex se.

According to Halm's reading the phrase may be considered to prepare the reader for Montanus' words, hoc certe Nero non coegit below. Regulus was supposed to have prosecuted Crassus with Nero's approval; and we may presume that in his defence on the present occasion the delator represented this approval as compulsion.

7. depellendi periculi, sc. causa: cp. note on ii. 100.

in spem potentiae = spe potentiae: cp. i. 12, in Vinii odium, 'to gratify their hatred of Vinius.'

9. cognosceret, 'would try the case': used here absolutely as in Dial. 41, clementia cognoscentis.

14. Pisonis, brother of Licinius Crassus, and likely to avenge his death.

15, 16. hoc .. coegit, a construction known to Cicero: cp. Pro Cluent. 159, quid lex et religio cogat.

16. dignitatem: Regulus' motive is said above to have been ambition.

17. istorum, persons who are obliged to attack others to save themselves from Nero: very probably Montanus is alluding to Eprius (whence isti), who justifies himself on this ground in ch. 8.

19. securum: Regulus was too poor to have anything to fear from Nero. Rarus venit in coenacula miles, Juv. x. 18.

22. hiatu = cupiditate: cp. i. 12, hiantes amicorum cupiditates.

24. inbuisti, 'handselled.'

funere reip. practically means 'the deadly wounds inflicted on the State' by the fall of distinguished men. So Cic. in Pisonem 21, patriae funus.

25. consularibus spoliis: Crassus and Orfitus were consulars.

saginnatus: the reading of M is signatus, out of which commentators have endeavoured to extort a meaning.

31. tam exped. consilii: 'so ready a counsellor.'

32. quo modo: cp. iii. 77, note.

36. ausuri, sc. offendere: M has visuri, which does not make very good sense.

38, 39. cum interim, also used with the indicative (i. 60).

39. intestabilior = detestabilior: as in A. vi. 40: its legal sense is, 'incapable of giving evidence.'

41. diutius ... mores: it is true that Vespasian may repress delatores: but his policy may end with his life; while, if we make an example of Regulus, it will be a lasting warning to offenders.

43, 44. more maiorum, sc. by scourging and execution.

44. optimus, etc.: now is the time for action, now that we are freed from a bad régime, and have not as yet had time to relapse. Cp. ii. 10, recenti Galbae principatu censuerant patres ut accusatorum causae noscerentur. Thus, after the death of Commodus, the senate demanded the punishment of professional accusers.

XLIII.

4. C. Rufus is chosen as an instance of a man whose influence with Nero (cp. Suet. Nero, 21) might well have made him dangerous.

11, 12. Crispus renidens: he was probably capable of treating the matter lightly. Juv. iv. 82 says of him venit et Crispi jucunda senectus, cuius erant mores qualis facundia, mite ingenium, and Quintilian mentions him as a humorist. It is he who is responsible for the bon mot about Domitian's fondness for killing flies: when asked if anyone was with the emperor, he replied, Not even a fly.

XLIV.

1, 2. de abolendo dolore iraque, the duty of forgetting old feuds; inchoante seems to be the same as referente.

2. necessitatibus, implying that individuals were often compelled by Nero to prosecute.

3. censuit prolixo pro, 'spoke in defence of'; prolixo is often used by Cic. in the sense of 'favourable': and Cato (as quoted by A. Gellius) speaks of res secundae atque prolixae.

4. repeterent, like Helvidius: cp. 6.

10. Sagitta, trib. pl. 58 A.D. He was punished for his crime under the lex Cornelia de sicariis et veneficiis by deportatio and loss of his property. The story is given at length in A. xiii. 44.

13. inpotens amoris, apparently = inpotens sui prae amore: amore vecors is the phrase in A. xiii.

Sosianus, praetor 62 A.D., punished with deportatio and loss of property for lampooning Nero: A. xiv. 48.

18. viles, sc. it made no difference whether mere ciphers like Sagitta and Sosianus were punished or not: it was the delatores against whom indignation was felt, and these Mucianus would not punish.

XLV.

1. reconciliavit, not necessarily with Mucianus : the meaning is rather that the senate had to deal with a case in which they could at last be unanimous.

3. senator, acc. to Orelli, means a senator and nothing more, a senator who had held no public office : cp. Cestius senator, A. iii. 36.

pulsatum : the law apparently recognized a distinction between pulsare and verberare ; according to the Digests, verberare est cum dolore caedere, pulsare sine dolore.

4. Senlensi, otherwise "colonia Sena Julia," in Etruria, the modern Siena. There was a place called Senia in Dalmatia : but this, acc. to Pliny, N.H. iii. 140, was not a colonia but an oppidum.

coetu, abl. of manner ; iussu, causal abl. So in the last sentence of the chapter damnatur is used with two abl. of different kinds, lege and exsilio.

6. planctum, etc., i.e. he was confronted with a sham funeral, in which he played the central part of corpse. So the modern object of unpopularity is burnt in effigy, and the "threatening letter" is illustrated with a coffin.

11. modestiae, i.e. their duty as law-abiding citizens ; v. note on modesti, i. 52.

12. Cyrenensibus : perhaps we should insert accusantibus : but damnatus can quite well be followed by dat., a kind of ethic dat. or dat. commodi : cp. Apronio condemnare, Cic. in Verr. 2. 3.

13. exsilio damnare, cp. Liv. x. 1, Frusinates tertia parte agri damnati, a kindred though not exactly similar use of the abl. In other places Tac. generally uses ad. Cp. A. vi. 38, extremum ad supplicium damnatus.

ob saevitiam, Flamma (proconsul of Crete, to which province Cyrene was attached) had taken a bribe to inflict the penalty of death on an innocent man : hence his banishment. Had his crime been simply extortion the case would have been tried by recuperatores, and the penalty would have been four-fold restitution of the amount extorted.

XLVI.

2. a Vitellio dimissi : cp. ii. 67.

5. Vitelliani : the praetorians who had surrendered at Narnia and Bovillae (iii. 63, iv. 2). 'They could not be dispersed without bloodshed,' only seems to imply that it would have been necessary to shed blood, not that they were actually dispersed in this way.

6. inmensa pecunia is followed in M by 'fer,' apparently a fragment of some lost word. From a confusion of pages in the MS. 'fer' is followed by the pages beginning with ne criniantium in 52, down to the end of ch. 53; hence there is a mistaken reading at the end of 53, quo tanta vis hominum retinenda erat. The words belong to this chapter, and are entirely out of place in the other passage.

7, 8. stipendia, their length of service: so, their respective claims.

15. si qui aliorum exerc.: i.e. any troops still in Rome, not sent away as some had been (39).

24. pari causa, 'seeing that they were in a like case.'

33. in praetorium, 'among the praetorians'; cp. 2, praeectura praetorii.

34. iusta stipendia: sixteen years for praetorians, twenty for legionaries.

55. carptim ac singuli, 'one by one and at different times': cp. Liv. xxviii. 25, seu carptim partes seu universi mallent convenire.

XLVII.

1. verane, etc.: 'whether the poverty was real or the intention was that it should seem so' (and so applicants for aid might be more plausibly refused). The alternatives are stated in the form of an indirect question. Cp. for 'an' iii. 25, vagus inde an consilio ducis subditus rumor.

3, 4. P. Silvanus, who had been consular legate of Dalmatia: dives senex, ii. 86.

Vespasian is said to have alleged at the beginning of his reign, 'quadringenties milies opus esse, ut respublica stare posset' (about £320,000,000).

5. legem ferente: as Vitellius had named the consuls for the next ten years, a formal annulling by a 'lex' was necessary.

funus censorium, 'a public funeral': so called because the contract in Republican days was let by the censors. It is the same as funus publicum.

XLVIII.

1. Piso, proconsul of Africa : cp. 38.

3. si pauca supra repetiero, etc., 'by a brief retrospect of certain matters connected with the reasons for such crimes.' Absurda = aliena.

6. proconsuli. Alone among senatorial provinces, Africa (the modern Tunis) had a permanent garrison. This was necessary, because of the indigenous Berber population, which has always been difficult to keep in hand under whatever masters—Carthaginian, Roman, Vandal, or French.

7. turbidus, 'restless.'

10. beneficiorum, distribution of offices and so forth.

11. mixtis utriusque mandatis, sc. as their powers were not clearly defined.

13. officii, 'tenure of office': legati were appointed and removed at the emperor's pleasure, and usually remained for several years in their command: while the governors of senatorial provinces changed annually, as in Republican times.

minoribus: the legatus being of inferior official rank to the proconsul.

15. securitati, 'comfort.'

XLIX.

1. Sed resumes the narrative after the digression of the last chapter.

1, 2. Val. Festus (ii. 98) had commanded the legio III. Augusta in 69 and 70: he was afterwards legatus in Pannonia and in Spain.

5. secreto; cp. ii. 4: 'private interviews.'

12. alae Petrianæ: cp. i. 70.

15. Galerianum: cp. 11.

22. continuuare = continenter optare.

25. gaudio, etc., 'they raised confused shouts of joy': cp. cuncta misceri, 29, and clamore et gaudiis (acc. to one reading), i. 27.

29. quaesitum sibi crimen caedemque: the expression may be almost a hendiadys, 'that the object was to fix on him a charge which would warrant his death.' The centurion was sent to tempt him to show his hand.

32. Macri, cp. 1. 7: he had really attempted that starvation of the city of which Piso had been falsely accused.

L.

1. consternatio, 'excitement': cp. 1. 83. Possibly the situation may have been so represented to Festus that he really thought Piso meditated revolt.

4. obscurum adhuc coeptae lucis, 'in the morning twilight,' a noticeable oxymoron.

8. quisnam, sc. qua facie.

12. Massa, a notorious delator under Domitian; Juvenal, i. 35, describes a dreaded accuser as one "whom even Massa fears." He was prosecuted by the younger Pliny and Senecio, and convicted for extortion as procurator of Hisp. Baetica. Cp. Agr. 45, and Plin. Ep. 7. 33 especially.

12, 13. e procuratoribus: cp. 1. 31, e Galbae amicis. On procuratores, v. 1. 2 note. Naturally there would be more than one finance officer in so large and rich a province as Africa: although it must be remembered that the procuratores would only control part of the finance of a senatorial province.

15. Adrumeto, modern Hamamet, south of Carthage on the sea-coast.

16. ad legionem: its headquarters were at Theveste (Tebessa), on the frontier of the province of Africa.

18. sed ... vocabat: notice the change to an independent sentence: one would expect vocans: cp. note on ch. 2.

21. Oeensum, on the site of the modern Tripoli.

Leptitanorum: Leptis lay south of Adrumetum, east of Oea: the modern Lemta.

23. inter agrestes is closely connected with raptu.

23, 24. iam per arma, etc.; as we should say, 'had assumed the proportions of a regular war.'

25. Garamantas, in the modern pachalik of Fessan. Virgil, Aen. vi., puts them among the most distant of known nations: super et Garamantas et Indos proferet imperium.

Pliny, N. H. v. 5, says Proximo bello quod cum Oceansibus Romani gessere auspiciis Vespasiani imp. compendium viae quatriddi deprehensum est (ad Garamantes): i.e. four days' journey from the coast.

26. latrociniiis fecundam, i.e. addicted to making continual raids. For the abl. cp. fecunda rumoribus, l. 51.

30. mapallum, huts or collections of huts of a kind peculiar to these African tribes: cp. Sall. Jug. 18. Their shape seems to have been that which is still found in the country, resembling a boat, keel upwards.

LI.

4. adgressi, as if the sea was an enemy to contend with: valet adgredi de re ardua, hostili, periculosa (Walther).

5. aderant, at Alexandria.

milii, omitted in M: cp. Suet. Vesp. 6, Vologesum promississe xl. milia sagittariorum.

7. auxillis ambiri = to receive the offer of assistance; cp. Aen. vii. 333, neu conubiis ambire Latinum Aeneadae possint (sc. precibus adire ut conubia concedat).

8, 9. legatos ad sen. mitteret; thus allowing the senate its ancient right of receiving embassies.

10. intentus in: cp. 17, in Gallias intentus.

13. Iudaici belli: the Jews had revolted in Nero's reign: v. Bk. 5. Cp. ii. 4, profligaverat bellum Iudaicum Vespasianus ('had nearly but not quite ended the war'): so here reliqua belli.

LII.

2. ferunt. Halm's correction of ms. dicebatur; I do not know why adopted, as the construction is common enough in Tacitus: cp. iii. 79, plebem armari nuntiabatur. "It is shrewdly remarked by Roth that verba sentiendi et declarandi in the passive are found with accus. and infin. when the matter is certain; with nomin. and infin. when it is uncertain" (Bach ap. Orell.) From such instances as I have observed, I should think this distinction is rather fanciful.

3. integrum, 'unprejudiced' by what Domitian's accusers might say.

4. praestaret; with which supply ut from the preceding ne.

8. indiscretum, 'inseparable': cp. inaccessus = inaccessible.

LIII.

1. restituendi Capitoli. It seems to be not quite certain whether Vespasian was himself present at the ceremony described in this chapter. From the fact that Tacitus does not mention his taking any part in it, we should infer his absence: yet Suetonius says distinctly that he was there and took an active part: rueribus purgandis manus primus admovit ac suo collo quaedam extulit (Vesp. 8): and Dio Cassius, lvi. 10, says very much the same.

Vestinum: possibly the man mentioned by Claudius in his speech on the ius honorum of the Gauls: ex qua colonia (sc. Viennensi) inter paucos equestris ordinis ornamentum L. Vestinum familiarissime diligo.

3. contracti, probably from the towns of Etruria, the home of their science: yet it may mean simply the assembling of the sixty haruspices who had formed a collegium at Rome since the days of Claudius (cp. A. xi. 15).

4. in paludes, the marshes of Ostia.

5. vestigis: cp. iii. 72, isdem rursus vestigiis situm est.

9. fausta nomina, 'lucky names,' such as Salvius, Valerius, Victor, Longinus. On the other hand, Curtius, Minucius, Furius, or Hostilius would be unlucky names. Cp. Cic. de Div. i. 102, cum imperator exercitum, censor populum lustraret, bonis nominibus qui hostias ducerent eligebantur: quod idem in dilectu consules observant, ut primus miles fiat bono nomine; and Plin. N. H. xxviii. 2, cur publicis lustris etiam nomina victimas ducentium prospera eligimus.

10. felicibus ramis, e.g. branches of oak, laurel, or myrtle —any tree which was dis grata. Cp. Ammianus, xxix. 1, verbenas felices arboris gestans; and Liv. xl. 37, coronati et lauream in manu tenentes supplicaverunt.

11. patrimis matrimisque, whose fathers and mothers were both alive: ἀμφιθαλεῖς. According to a note of Servius on Georg. i. 31, they must be the offspring of confarreati; but probably now that confarreatio had fallen into comparative disuse, it was only necessary that the children should be ingenui, and perhaps that their fathers should be senators.

aqua ... perluere: cp. Tertull. de Bapt. v., villas domos templa totasque urbes aspergine circumlatae aquae expiant passim. Thus it seems that vessels of 'holy water,' περὶ παρρηΐα, were kept in temples to sprinkle the priests and worshippers. In M trimis follows aqua in the text: evidently a dittographia caused by the preceding patrimis or matrimis.

12. H. Priscus praetor: Domitian ranked highest among the praetors, as pr. urbanus: but he had probably set out for Gaul.

13. praeceunte, 'dictating' the proper form of words.

Pl. Aellano: probably identical with T. Plautius Silvanus Aelianus, mentioned in an inscription as having held various offices: pontifex sodalis Augustalis triumvir auro aeri argento flando feriundo Tib. Caesaris legatus leg. v. in Germania praetor urbanus legatus et comes Claudii Caesaris in Britannia consul proconsule Asiae legatus propraetore Moesiae.

14. suovetaurilibus, a sacrifice consisting of a bull, boar, and ram, offered to Mars: such as is represented on a relief preserved in the Forum (Middleton, p. 219).

redditis, the proper ceremonial expression, apparently: cp. Virgil, Georg. ii. 194, lancibus et pandis fumantia reddimus exta: on which Servius' note is reddi dicebantur exta cum probata et elixa arae (so here super caespitem, on the turf altar) superponebantur.

18. lapis, sc. the first stone.

23. metallorum primitiae, etc., sc. virgin ore: victae is a more elegant equivalent for coctae.

27. credebatur. M has credi: Orell. read creditum.

LIV.

1. interim, at the end of December or beginning of January. Tacitus anticipates the order of events for convenience' sake in describing the foundation of the Capitol, xi. Kal. Jul.

2. dissimulatione; he no longer pretended to be fighting for Vespasian.

7. Sarmatis, etc. There was some foundation for this report in so far as the Dacians had made a quickly checked raid upon Moesia; iii. 46.

10. finem imperio: cp. iii. 72, note.

15. Druidae, who seem to have personified the spirit of hostility to Rome. "They used religious enthusiasm to fan the flame of national aspirations for independence," Heräus says. "They had no reason to love the Romans at this time, as their worship had been abolished, and they themselves persecuted by Claudius" (Suet. Cl. 25). On the Druidae in general v. Caes. B. G. vi. 12. Thierry describing the present occasion says: On vit alors de toutes parts les Druides sortir des retraites sauvages où la persécution de Claude les avait relégués, et reparaitre en triomphe dans les villes, avec les Bardes, les chants prophétiques, les immolations humaines, et l'attirail ressuscité du vieux fanatisme (Hist. des Gaulois, iii.)

16. primores Galliarum: Orelli thought that these may be the legati sent by Otho to the armies of Germany (i. 74): but there is no evidence to guide us in the matter. More probably the reference is to envoys sent by Otho to work for his cause in Gaul: then antequam digrederentur would mean 'before they separated, to go to their respective communities.'

LV.

4. Classicus had served against Otho under Valens (ii. 14).

5. pace belloque, the Ciceronian phrase would be domi militiaeque.

7. socios iactabat. Or. read after M socius iactabat, which he explains as a Greek construction—εὐχερο εἶπαι. On the omission of potius, v. note on iii. 70.

8. hic ... hic, instead of hic ... ille: apparently in imitation of several passages in Virgil.

Lingonus, a form found in Martial, viii. 75, and a Gallic inscription: although the plural is always Lingones, accus. Lingonas.

16. publice, the town as a community: cp. note on publice donatos, i. 51.

19. moras consultandi, the delays of deliberation, i.e. which would be caused by deliberation. Such genitives of definition are common in Cicero: e.g. suboles juventutis. Cp. the Homeric τέλος θανάτου.

21. cum maxime, 'at this very moment': cp. i. 29.

22. distineri, i.e. their attention was fully occupied.

23. disceptaturas : M has discep at the end of a line, the next beginning with ras ; in the margin, "al. despecturas," by the same hand : hence Or. read dispecturas.

---

LVI.

2. plerique, here evidently 'many,' as often in Tacitus.

6, 7. ceterum vulgus = ceteros, hoc est, vulgus.

8. concilii, reading of M : Or. read consilii, which makes better sense.

11. Voculae : he was now at Mogontiacum.

14. e praesentibus, 'under the circumstances.'

15. isdem : Livy would say isdem artibus : cp. nec fefellit Hannibalem suis se artibus peti : xxii. 16.

17. commeatum ; M has commentum : Orell. read conventum, 'the whole district' : Meiser motum.

22 Nerviorum, v. 15.

Bastasiolorum : between the Tungri and Nervii, in the neighbourhood of the modern Beetz, in Brabant.

24. Marsacos, acc. to Heräus neighbours of the Canninefates, between the mouths of Maas and Scheld : Orelli places them (cp. Pliny, N.H. iv. 28. 31) east of the Leyden mouth of the Rhine.

incursabat : cp. iii. 18, note.

LVII.

2. Veteribus, once more besieged by Civilis : cp. 36.

Classicus ac Tutor appear thus to have been still with Vocula's force.

5. legionibus ; probably the 1st and 16th : as the 5th and 15th—the majority at any rate—were in the besieged camp, and the garrison of Mogontiacum is mentioned separately in 59.

10. et ultores : et is really out of place according to the ordinary Latin usage : but perhaps it is used in order to emphasise ultores deos.

11. Sacrovirum et Aeduos : the Aedui and Treveri revolted in 21 A.D. headed respectively by Sacrovir and Florus : the rebellion was promptly repressed (A. iii. 40-46).

Vindicem : v. Introduction to Book I.

15. Galbam et infracta tributa, 'Galbas' reduction of the tribute.' As a matter of fact Galba had made no reduction in the case of those Gauls whom Vocula was now addressing : cp. i. 8, proximae Germanicis exercitibus Galliarum civitates non eodem honore habitae, quaedam etiam finibus ademptis. So i. 53, Treveri et Lingones quasque alias civitates atrocibus edictis aut damno finium Galba perculerat.

Wolff reads 'post Galbam,' when the subject of induisse would be eos.

16. quia : on the omission of 'sit' v. i. 21 note.

22. Romani exercitus. M Romanus exercitus : which Or. makes subject of iurarent. Al. Romanis exercitibus.

LVIII.

2. pro me securior, instead of de me : cp. Agr. 26, securi pro salute.

4. solacium : M hostium : other conjectures are haustam and honestam.

6. fas armorum, earlier writers would say ius belli : it means much the same as ius hostium.

13. socii saepe nostri, e.g. the garrisons of Saguntum and Casilinum in the Punic wars.

14. pertulerunt with acc. and inf. is a usage of the silver age : earlier authors would employ pati.

15. *fides fama*que, hendiadys.

16. cum maxime : cp. 55.

20. nuper : cp. 36.

23. bellorum victores : cp. the same expression A. i. 19.

25. trahendi, absolute, 'gaining time.' Cp. Virgil, Aen. vii. 315, at trahere atque moras tantis licet addere rebus.

27. sane ego displiceam, 'sane' has a concessive force here as often (so it is frequently answered by tamen) : "it is true, perhaps I am unpopular." Cp. Cicero Tusc. ii. 14, ne sit sane summum malum dolor : malum certe est.

28. ne hoc, etc. The connection with the last clause appears to be, "you have other officers—choose whom you will as leader, only do not let Civilis lead you against Italy."

32. Tutori, a sort of dativus commodi.

33. agentur excubiae, sc. stand on guard.

33, 34. et Germanorum : Heräus reads Gallorum et Germanorum to get rid of the slight difficulty of et.

35. se contra derexerint : se is not in M.

39. octingentos viginti, 823 strictly speaking.

40. precor venerorque, 'I humbly pray' : Lat. thus often uses two verbs where we express the meaning by a verb plus an adverb : cp. fusi fugatique, 'utterly routed.'

41. si vobis non fuit cordi, etc. There is a similar prayer in Liv. ix. 8 : vos di immortales precor quæsoque, si vobis non fuit cordi consules cum Samnitibus prospere bellum gerere, at vos satis habeatis, etc.

44. detis, with which ut must be supplied from ut ne, as from ne in 52.

LIX.

1. inter spem, etc. The prepos. as it were expresses the throng of emotions which Vocula's words encountered : 'according as the men were actuated by hope, fear or shame.' Inter is used in a somewhat similar way—describing some element in the situation which has to be considered—in procacissimis etiam inter servos lizarum ingeniis, ii. 87, where v. note.

6. Herennium, commanding the 1st legion (19). It is not certain of which legion Num. was legatus : perhaps the 16th.

8. insignibus, the purple cloak, and the lictors.

11-13. altis ordinibus... attollit, 'gave him high promotion' : ordinibus is ablat. The plural appears to be used because Longinus was probably not at once promoted to the post of centurio primipilus, but was allowed to pass quickly through the intervening stages. On the meaning of ordo v. i. 31 note ; here it is probably used with special reference to the technical phrase ordinem ducere (to be a centurion).

14. curae, 'the command' : curare is used absolutely in this sense.

15, 16. quantum militum, sc. erat : cp. quod militum, 15. These would probably be the 4th and 22nd legion (Orell. 18th), at Mogontiacum ; for the third of the legions of the upper Rhine, the 21st, had its headquarters at Vindonissa (Windisch, at the confluence of the Aar and Reuss): and this place seems to have been left undisturbed.

21. praesentia sequerentur, sc. would follow the example of their comrades.

---

LX.

4. profana, sc. quibus vesci nefas est: 'unclean.'

6. saxis, probably a merely conventional touch, as the ground near Xanten is not rocky or stony at all.

12. calones, being slaves, were regarded as chattels.

13. leves, lightly equipped or laden: cp. G. 6, nudi aut sagulo leves.

13, 14. ad quintum, near Alpen, between Xanten and Rheinberg.

20. faces incipiunt; yet Vetera is mentioned in the later itineraries as a military post.

LXI.

1. barbaro voto; such vows appear to have been common among the Germans, and sometimes to have been taken by an entire community: e.g. the Chatti (Germ. 31). Paulus Diaconus (Gesta Langobard. iii. 7) tells us that 6000 Saxons vowed to grow their hair and beard till they should be avenged on their enemies the Suevi. A vow of this kind is recorded as having been taken by Julius Caesar himself (Suet. Jul. 67).

2. propexum = promissum: cp. Aen. x. 838, propexam in pectore barbam.

rutilatum: this Batavian method of artificially reddening the hair is mentioned by Martial, viii. 33, et mutat Latias spuma Batava comas: Pliny also (N. H. xxviii. 12) speaks of a Gallic fashion of colouring the hair with tallow and ashes. It is therefore unnecessary to suppose that Civilis reddened his hair in fulfilment of a vow: Tac. simply mentions that it was rutilatus in accordance with German or Gallic custom.

9. Lupercus: v. note on 18.

10. Velaedae: this Deborah of the insurgent Batavians was arrested and brought to Rome on the occasion of a subsequent revolt in Vespasian's reign. Cp. Germ. 8, and Stat. Silv. i. 4, 90, captivaeque preces Veleadae (at the beginning of a hexameter, which would settle the quantity of the second syllable, if D. Cass. lxxvii. 5, on the other hand, did not call her Βελήδα).

10. Bructærae, cp. 21.

11. imperitabat, probably implies nothing more than a wide influence over men's minds, not an actual sovereignty.

18. pignus societati: cp. i. 67, initium bello.

20. Vindonissae: cp. note on 59. From i. 61 it appears that the 21st legion, the garrison of Vindonissa, had followed Caecina to Italy: so that the post would only be held by the dépot.

---

LXII.

6. rubore et infamia, hendiadys: 'blushing for their disgrace.'

6, 7. quis dux viae, sc. esset: in rhetorical or exclamatory questions like this the usual construction is acc. and infin.

14. haud perinde notabilis, 'not so noticeable' (as outside): there is a similar ellipse after haud perinde in ii. 84.

15. imperatorum imagines, likenesses of emperors attached to the standards, which, deprived of them, would be inhonora. So i. 41, Galbae imaginem. Cp. iii. 13.

18. dirus ore, ingenio debilior, 'hideous of expression and mentally yet more incapable' than physically: the loss of an eye being of course a kind of debilitas.

24. ala Picentina, not elsewhere mentioned by Tacitus, but named in a military patent of 74 A.D. (where it is called Picentiana), also on an inscription near Mainz.

LXIII.

1. sublati = elati: cp. Aen. x. 502, rebus sublata secundis.

4. civitatibus = urbis, as often in the Histories: cp. e.g. 65 muros civitatis.

5. ratio belli: the destruction of the town would have lost them the support of the Ubii at any rate.

9. honorata custodia habuerant; M, honoratas custodierant; Orelli read honorate custodierant.

12. promisca, etc., 'were thrown open to all German settlers alike': whether they wished to become citizens of the town or to preserve their own nationality. The Ubii are reproached with sacrificing their kinship with the Germans for the name of Agrippinenses (28).

LXIV.

1. Tencteri, v. 21.

2. concilium, apparently a general assemblage of the people (cp. the Roman concilium plebis), not the consilium publicum or body of decuriones.

5. Marti: Mars appears according to Roman ideas to have corresponded to the German deity, Tiu or Zio; hence our Tuesday is in French Mardi (dies Martis).

8. caelum ... clausurant, I suppose, by the height of their walls and ramparts.

10, 11. inermes: cp. G. 13, nihil autem neque publicae neque privatae rei nisi armati agunt. Orelli says that within his own recollection the country people round Zurich used to carry arms when they met to elect local authorities.

11. sub custode et pretio: the Germans were obliged to pay so much for coming into the town at all, and when they were inside must be under police supervision. So the Ubii answer (65) vectigal et onera commerciorum resolvimus: sint transitus incustoditi, etc. In G. 41 the Hermunduri are said to cross the Danube passim et sine custode.

12, 13. rata sint: for the neuter cp. iii. 70, pacem et concordiam victis utilia.

14. detrahatis: one would expect diruatis; but cp. A. xv. 17, detraheret castella trans Euphratem. Cp. G. 16, Nullus Germanorum populis urbes habitari satis notum est. The walled town is the sign of Roman dominion, as opposed to the open villages of the German.

16. finibus: the territory of the Ubii extended south as far as Andernach, northward into the neighbourhood of Uerdingen.

18. in medium cedant, 'be made public property': cp. iii. 83, spolia in vulgus cedebant. In medium or in commune is frequently used by Tacitus; cp. e.g. H. ii. 5, in medium consulere (sc. in medium convenire consultatum), all parties as it were meeting at a central point for deliberation.

24. abruptis, as if they were chains: cp. abruptis vitae blandimentis, ii. 53.

25. sincerus et integer, 'simple and uncorrupted' by Roman luxuries.

26. ex aequo agētis: the same phrase Agr. 20.

LXV.

2. quando = quādoquidem : cp. i. 87.

8. cum maxime, cp. 55.

11. eos bellum, etc. The object of absumpsit becomes the subject of refugerunt : there is a reversal of the process in A. ii. 83, quaedam statim omīssa sunt aut vetustas oblīteravit.

12. olim, only twenty years before: the colony was founded in 50 A.D. at the bidding of the younger Agrippina: cp. A. xii. 27. Deductis means 'brought as colonists.'

13. provenerunt : before the silver age the word is used only of products of the soil.

18. nova et recentia : novum est non quod nuper, sed quod nunc primum habemus; recens vero non quod nunc primum, sed quod nuper. Et novum ad rem (i.e. it means not only new but strange) recens ad tempus refertur (Manutius).

vetustate in consuetudinem. M, in vetustatem consuetudine; followed by Orelli.

25. edita in turre : all that can be asserted about the locality of the tower is that it must have been near the navigable part of the Lippe : cp. v. 22, hostes a se captam praetoriam triremem flumine Luppia donum Veledae trahere.

consulta, 'questions.'

LXVI.

1. auctus, 'strengthened' : cp. A. iv. 23, auctus Maurorum auxiliis.

3. Sunucis, the western neighbours of the Ubii, between the Meuse and Rür. The modern village of Sinnich perhaps preserves their name.

7. pontem Mosae, probably at the same point as the later town of Traiectus Mosae (Maastricht).

10. an, 'or perhaps' : cp. iii. 25, an consilio ducis.

14. seu me ducem, etc. : cp. Sall. Cat. 20, vel imperatore vel milite me utimini.

18. profugit: cp. 70, Civilis avia Belgarum circumibat dum C. Labonem capere aut exturbare nititur.

20. ingens rerum : if the reading is right, the genitive is one of respect, and the meaning is 'immensely powerful,' Heräus asserts that res cannot mean 'power,' unless it is supplemented by an adjective (e.g. res modicae) or joined with a verbal substantive, as possessio rerum, 61: and he is inclined to think that fiducia or more probably columnen has been lost. Ingens rerum fiducia occurs ii. 4: but fiducia would not accord well with the following perculsis. Ruperti and Döderlein suggest virium instead of rerum. Probably the reading in the text is right, and the phrase intentionally strange.

LXVII.

2. monumentis, tablets or columns on which the treaty was inscribed: cp. Livy ii. 33, foedus cum Latinis columna aenea insculptum.

3. Sequanos, cp. i. 51: their capital was Vesontio (Besançon).

6. melioribus, rather 'more loyal' than 'braver.'

6, 7. fusi Lingones: according to Frontinus, 70,000 armed men surrendered (Strateg. iv. 3).

11. novem: he was captured in 79, sent to Rome, and executed.

13. suo loco, among the events of the year 79, in the lost part of the Histories. The story is given by D. Cass. and Plutarch: acc. to the former (lxvi. 16) Sabinus and his wife were concealed for nine years in a μημεῖον ἐντρίχων, where two sons were born to them.

14. stetit, 'was checked': cp. Agr. 16, seditio sine sanguine stetit.

16. Remis, between the Marne and Aisne, near the modern Reims (Durocontorum Remorum, Caes. B. G. vi. 44).

---

LXVIII.

1. in deterius audita, on the analogy of such phrases as in det. aucta; cp. iii. 13.

3. Gallum Annium, one of Otho's generals; cp. i. 87. He was now sent to Upper Germany, while Petilius Cerialis was to take command in the lower province. On Cerialis, v. iii. 59. According to Josephus, Cerialis had been sent by Vespasian to Britain, and on his way arrived in the midst of the rebellion.

4. summam belli, 'the management of the war': cp. A. xiv. 7, poscit summam sceleris.

10. ageret: v. note on agebat, iii. 42.

annonae: the praefectus annonae had the care of the public granaries, and was thus responsible for the regular provisioning of the capital: cp. A. i. 7, where he takes rank with the praefectus praetorio next to the consuls.

12. A. Clementem, a brother of Titus' first wife: according to Suet. Dom. 11, unus e familiaribus et emissariis (Domitiani).

16, 17. senat. ordinis: Augustus first made it a rule to take praefecti praetorio from the equestrian order: an exception had already been made in the case of Tiberius' minister Sejanus.

17. adsumuntur, i.e. as companions of the expedition: e civitate may perhaps mean, as Heräus says, 'from the civilians,' as opposed to Gallus and Cerialis.

18. per ambitionem is opposed to clarissimus quisque, which practically means alii propter claritatem.

20. moras nectens: the same expression, iii. 52.

22. invasisset has rather the idea of coming with an evil result: tamquam pestilentia, Heräus says.

23. victrices: sc. from the Flavian legions.

octava, mentioned as taking its share in the recent campaign, iii. 10. 21. 27. The undecima was one of Otho's legions, and had originally been quartered in Pannonia.

24. unaetvicensima—called Rapax: it had formed the main strength of Caecina's army (i. 61). Its headquarters were at Vindonissa.

25. secunda, Adjutrix, composed of the marines who had deserted the Vitellian cause at Ravenna.

Poeninis Cottianisque: v. notes on i. 61.

Grato, v. note on ii. 66.

26. xiv. leg. e Britannia: cp. ii. 66. 86.

27. sexta, Victrix.

decuma, Gemina: cp. iii. 44.

29. mitiora, 'a soberer policy.'

LXIX.

2. bona dissertans: cp. note on disserens, iii. 81.

9. Vindicis motus: v. Introduction to Books I. and II. From what Tacitus says here, it appears that Vindex' rising was regarded by the Gauls as an assertion of national independence—whatever may have been the objects of Vindex himself.

11. jus auspiciumque: à qui demanderait-on les ordres et les auspices? (Louandre): sc. whom were they to recognize as sovereign? Roman generals now received the ius auspiciorum from the emperor: formerly it was conferred by the people; cp. Liv. xxii. 1, quod enim illi (Flaminius) iustum imperium, quod auspicium esse?

14. per iurgia, 'angrily.'

LXX.

2, 3. suscepti discriminis: Heräus points out that in German (and the same applies to English) the adj. and subst. would be reversed, and the phrase would be 'the dangerous undertaking.' So e.g. in Aen. vii. 351 tortile aurum would be rendered 'a golden chain.'

3. in unum consulere: cp. I. 68.

4. avia Belgarum: perhaps the marshy districts of Flanders, south of the mouth of the Scheld.

7. superiorem G. ripam, i.e. that part which was not controlled by the Vindonissa garrison: for the latter had taken no part so far in the war.

10. per Raetiam: cp. iii. 5, where Sextilius Felix holds the Inn valley. His present route would thus lead him over the Arlberg pass, and so past Feldkirch to Switzerland and the Upper Rhine.

11. ala Singularium: a body of cavalry composed of picked men (singulares) of various nationalities: raised by Galba, according to Heräus: but Orelli says they are mentioned in an inscription of the Augustan age. Hyginus classes them under equites praetoriani, making them an imperial body-guard.

13. Briganticus, praefectus alae, ii. 22. He was slain in the battle on the Waal of v. 21.

14. ut ferme, etc., 'with the bitterness of a family feud': cp. the feud between Arminius and Segestes, of which Tacitus says (A. i. 55) quaeque apud concordes vincula caritatis incitamenta irarum apud infensos erant.

16. Vangionum, in the neighbourhood of Borbetomagus (Worms): Triboci, in Alsace; Caeracates, not elsewhere mentioned. Saravatum (the people of the Saravus or Saar) has been suggested.

18. legionariis, the garrison of Mainz: v. 59.

21. secutis: earlier prose authors apparently do not use the perfect part. of a transitive deponent in the abl. abs. Notice that the time is subsequent to that of the principal verb.

23. Bingium: as Tutor appears to have occupied the left bank of the Nava (Nahe), either Bingium must have stood there, on the site of the modern Bingerbrück, or Bingium concessit is used loosely: for Bingen itself is on the right bank. Ausonius (Mosella) calls it Vincum.

26. vado: the Nahe must then have been a more considerable stream than at present.

26, 27. ea clade: Ausonius (Mosella) calls this defeat 'the Cannae of Gaul': aequavit Latias ubi quondam Gallia Cannas.

30. legiones: i., xvi., cp. 62.

32. in verba Vesp. adigunt: their sixth change of allegiance since the beginning of the year 69.

35. Mediomatricos, in the neighbourhood of Metz (Divodurum, later Mettis).

LXXI.

4. melior, with the dative as here, supplies the place of the wanting comparative of idoneus.

6. dilectus, here a concrete subst. 'the men levied,' or levies, as we say: cp. 24, missis per Galliam qui auxilia concirent.

7. imperio, probably means 'for his command': i.e. he required no other soldiers than the legions.

legiones: i., xvi.

20. Mogontiaci: the men of the 4th and 22nd legions.

21. tertiis castris: from Mainz to Riol or Rigodulum is about 27 hours' march. The road from Bingen to Trier led through the 'Soonwald' and over the Hunsrück (the range of hills lying between the Rhine, Moselle, and Nahe) past Stromberg to Neumagen on the Moselle.

Rigodulum. About 9 miles below Trier, the hills receding from the right bank of the Moselle form a semicircle in which lie the villages of Longwich and Riol: the latter standing back from the river actually where the hills begin to ascend, and flanked on the west (the side nearest to Trier) by a low projecting spur now covered with corn-fields and orchards (the aequiora iuga of Tacitus). Valentinus had occupied this village, and as he no doubt expected to be attacked from the river bank, by which the Romans were advancing from Neumagen, he had strengthened his position on that side by fossae obicesque saxorum. But Cerialis did not only make a direct attack on these entrenchments: his cavalry rode some little way up the hills lying to the rear of Riol, and from thence charged down on the Treveri, who had manifestly left this side unfortified. Then either from the heights or from the river bank a detachment was sent by way of the 'gentler ascent' to cut off the enemies' retreat westwards towards Trier.

Evidently Valentinus had only partially fortified his position; but it is strange that—if Riol exactly corresponds to Rigodulum—he should have left it unprotected on the side of the montes, which are here not particularly steep.

23. montibus aut Mos. amne: i.e. on one side by the heights, on the other by the river.

29. praevehuntur (the nomin. is equites), 'were exposed to,' 'were running the gauntlet of': i.e. while the cavalry were making a détour up the hill so as to gain a point of vantage behind Riol, their flank would necessarily be exposed to the enemy's missiles: cp. ii. 2, lueva maris praevectus.

31. aequioribus iugis, 'up a gentler ascent.'

32. Belgarum, sc. Treverorum et Lingonum.

in quis: Cicero and Caesar would say 'in his.'

LXXII.

1. coloniam Treverorum: Trier. It was founded by Nero or Claudius, and was in later times the capital of the province 'Belgica prima,' and a residence of Roman emperors: hence called by Ansonius (Mosella, 380) imperii sedes. At this day it possesses the most extensive Roman remains of any town north of the Alps. On its history see Prof. Freeman's Essay (Augusta Treverorum).

4, 5. quid ... meruisse, sc. quod scelus admisisse.

5. gremio Italiae, 'the heart of Italy,' as we should say.

8. in fiscum, the emperor's privy purse.

10. pensarentur, 'balanced': cp. Agr. 22, damna eventibus pensare.

14. legionum, i., xvi.

22. vocem precesque is a hendiadys, as also lacrimis ac silentio: 'open entreaty,' 'silent tears.'

LXXIII.

This 'Apologia pro Imperio Romano' should be compared with Civilis' speech in ch. 17.

7. profligato: properly the word means 'almost finished': cp. ii. 4.

9, 10. duces imperatoresque: when the two words are in juxtaposition, dux generally means the lieutenant as distinguished from the commander-in-chief: cp. Caes. B. G. vi. 8, praestate eandem nobis ducibus virtutem quam saepenumero imperatori praestitistis.

12. acciti auxilio Germani under Ariovistus: cp. Caes. B. G. i. 31.

15, 16. Germ. bella: under Tiberius, Drusus, and Germanicus.

18. altus: one would expect 'alter.'

23. paludibus: cp. Germ. 5, terra in universum aut silvis horrida aut paludibus foeda.

26, 27. alienum serv. et dom. sibi: alienum is for alii or sibi for suam. Notice also the chiasmus.

LXXIV.

2. in nostrum ius concederetis, 'united yourselves with us,' a less offensive expression than in dicionem concederetis, 'submitted to us': cp. Sall. Cat. 20, postquam in ius atque dicionem concessit.

8. ipsi, etc.: since the admission of a Gallic province to the R. franchise in 48 A.D., they might often (plerumque) hold high commands: for instance, Vindex, propraetor of Gaul, was a native of the country.

11. proximis ingruunt, 'injure none but those nearest to them.'

21. disciplina, 'political traditions. Plutarch de Fort. Rom. has a similar passage: the Roman empire grew by τύχη καὶ ἀρετῇ to be πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις ἐστία ἱερὰ ὡς ἀληθῶς καὶ ὀνησιδώρα καὶ πείσμα μόνιμον καὶ στοιχεῖον αἰδίου.

24. aurum et opes: cp. 17, validissimae ditissimaeque nationes (the Gallic provinces).

25. proinde, hortative, as usual.

26. eodem iure, both holding the same status as Roman citizens. Or perhaps it means, that the victors had as good a right to the town as its inhabitants, their defeated opponents. pacem et urbem...amate: sc. be loyal inhabitants of your town, not (as the Germans would have you) of unfortified villages.

27. utriusque fortunae: the evil fate of rebels and the success of the loyal.

LXXV.

2. epistulas, 'a letter': cp. i. 67.

7, 9. velit ... malit: but perhaps we should retain mallet, with M.

10. ipsas epist., the reading of M: Heräus reads ipsis (after misit).

13. culpabant, used with acc. and inf. on the analogy of such words as criminari or arguere.

15. intutis, sc. not fortified. But the word is not well placed, and looks rather like a gloss on temere.

LXXVI.

2. Civillis: the predicate censebat or something of that kind is easily supplied from sententiis.

5. roboris: cp. Caes. B. G. i. 1, Gallorum omnium fortissimi sunt Belgae.

5. voto, 'in their hearts.'

8. e Brit. legionem, the 14th: cp. 68; the vi. Victrix and x. from Spain; the viii., xi., xxi. from Italy.

10. subitum, i.e. hastily levied.

veterem: cp. 20, veteres militiae; and for expertum, Aen. x. 173, expertos belli.

14. et neminem: the ordinary phrase would be nec quemquam.

22. adulescentuli: alluding to Valentinus.

quam, for magis quam: cp. iii. 70.

25. precariam, sc. the fact that they had so often had to beg their lives of their conqueror.

29. exsequuntur, sc. consilium: 'they proceeded to the execution.'

LXXVII.

1. Lingonibus: they still formed part of Civilis' army. though their country had nominally submitted to the Romans.

3. montibus, 'over the hills': cp. 71, aequioribus iugis circumvecta.

The colonia Treverorum stood where Trier now stands on the right bank of the Moselle: to protect it against Civilis, whose forces were in the district north-west of the town, the legions were encamped on the left bank, guarding the road which ran between the river and the parallel line of hills. Apparently they were near the bridge, of which the modern bridge is probably the direct descendant: some of its piers are said to be Roman. Civilis attacked them from two sides, at once from the hills and from the upper banks of the river: the Roman camp was stormed, and communication with the town cut off by the occupation of the bridge. Cerialis had been passing the night on the right bank: on the news of the attack he hastened to the bridge and succeeded in recovering it, whence he proceeded to the camp.

9. legionum. i., xvi. They had both surrendered at Novaesium; but as one of them had its headquarters at Bonn, Tac. can speak of them as captae apud Nov. Bonnamque.

10. medius, i.e. between him and his army. Uteriora simply means the other bank: we need not suppose a suburb.

12. manu, 'forcibly.'

20. proditio: it was by the cry of 'treason' that they had justified the deaths of Flaccus and Vocula.

24. ite, nuntiate, etc. Cerialis, turbidis rebus intrepidus, had according to Tac. presence of mind enough to remember and imitate an address of Sulla in a similar crisis: cp. Plut. Sull. 21.

LXXVIII.

2. per cohortes, 'in cohorts': cp. the same expression 66.

3. patescere: instead of the more usual explicari.

6. pugnam ciebant: cp. pugnam ciens, ii. 25.

12. cohortium, i.e., auxiliaries.

17, 18. ut...ita, 'although...yet,' as often, especially in Livy.

18. secutus fortunam, 'following up his success.'

LXXIX.

1. in longum: cp. 22, note.

6. invocantium, sc. Ceriale.

9. Chaucis, settled between the Ems and Weser.

10. Tolbiaci, Zülpich, a town of the Ubii, S.W. of Cologne.

15. circumsteterat picturesquely expresses that he had fears from another quarter as well.

16, 17. Brit. classe: the British coast was a regular station for part of the Roman fleet.

18. terrestri itinere: the legions were landed at Gessoriacum (Boulogne), whence a road, still traceable, led to Bagacum Nerviorum (Bavai), Aduatuca Tungrorum (Tongres), and the Colonia Agrippinensis.

20. ultra, without being themselves attacked: cp. i. 7, note.

27. lacerabant, 'damaged': cp. the same expression Liv. xxxviii. 54

LXXX.

The narrative of the war is interrupted and not resumed till v. 14.

1. Vit. filium : on whom v. ii. 53.

3. semina belli restinxisset : a curious confusion of metaphors. Cic. can even say aquam extinguere.

4. comites : the amici or comites of the emperor almost held a distinct official rank : they were in general his ministers or advisers, and were often obliged to attend his person. It was said of Domitian that he was a bad emperor, but had excellent ministers : the proceres of Juvenal's Fourth Satire.

6. adeo : v. i. 9, note.

9. trahebatur, sc. imperator : for a similar abrupt change of subject cp. iii. 77, reliquae in litore captae aut .. mare hausit.

13. neque ipse deerat vocare : on the construction, v. note on i. 22 ; vocare, the simple verb instead of the commoner provocare, according to Tacitus' practice : cp. v. 25, sin populum R. armis vocent.

14. nimius, etc., 'too fond of insisting on his services' : cp. i. 35, nimii verbis.

16. dediticium, properly, one who has surrendered at discretion ; on the details of Caecina's change of sides, v. iii. 13.

LXXXI.

2. statos aest. flatibus dies, 'the regular season of the summer winds,' the east winds blowing from the end of May till the latter part of July ; after which navigation would be hindered by the north-west or 'Etesian' winds, continuing for about 40 days ; cp. ii. 98 and A. vi. 33.

6. oculorum tabe = caecitate : the man was luminibus orbatus, Suet. Vesp. 7.

6, 7. genua eius advolvitur. Sallust has this construction once, instead of the commoner genibus advolvi.

Tacitus is fond of constructing such compounds with the accusative—advelli, incidere, irrumperere, etc. Cicero and Caesar in general avoid this usage.

10. oculorum orbes, poetical for 'oculos,' as oris excrementum for 'saliva.' Soph. Ant. 974, ὀμμάτων κύκλοι. Cp. Tacitus' use of debilitas pedum for 'podagra.' For the use of spittle in such works of healing cp. St. Mark's Gospel, viii. 22.

11. manum aeger: cp. Germ. 7, nudae brachia. Suetonius says it was the leg that was affected.

14. vanitatis surely means 'foolish presumption,' not 'failure,' as Heräus renders it.

20. elapsos in pravum, 'distorted.'

23, 24. inriti ludibrium penes miseros, sc. it was the afflicted man and not the emperor who would be a laughing-stock if the attempt were to fail.

24, 25. cuncta fortunae suae patere: for the belief in Vespasian as the 'man of destiny' cp. ii. 82, sufficere videbantur ... Vespasiani nomen et nihil arduum fatis.

28, 29. nunc quoque, in the reign of Trajan, when the Histories were published.

LXXXII.

2. sacram sedem, the temple of Serapis.

5. Bas'liden: the truth of the story is not confirmed by the identity of the name with that of the priest of Carmel spoken of ii. 78. Suet. calls this man 'libertus.'

12. tunc divinam speciem, etc.: Vesp. saw that the god himself had assumed the person of Basilides, and inferred that his so doing was a prophecy of the Flavian sovereignty (βασιλεία).

LXXXIII.

1. origo dei; not, of course, Serapis, but the foreign deity who was in some way identified with him. Tac. in fact implies what Plutarch (de Iside et Osiride, 28) says distinctly—that the Sinopite god was not originally called Serapis, but received the name in Egypt. οὐ γὰρ ἐκεῖθεν οὕτως ὀνομαζόμενος ἦκεν ἀλλ' εἰς Ἀλεξανδρείαν κομισθεὶς τὸ παρ' Αἰγυπτίοις ὄνομα τοῦ Πλούτωνος ἐκτήσατο τὸν Σάραπιν.

It is quite possible that the story, as given in Tacitus, is altogether apocryphal. Suidas and Strabo associate the cult of Serapis or this kindred deity with Memphis. Dionys. Periegetes (254) speaks of Σινωπῆταο Διὸς μεγάλοιο μέλαθρον at Alexandria, commenting on which Eustathius says Σινωπίτης δὲ Ζεὺς, ἢ ὁ Μεμφίτης. Σινώπιον γὰρ ὅρος Μεμφίδος. ἢ ἀπὸ Σινώπης τῆς Ποντικῆς. φέρεται καὶ τοιοῦτος λόγος εἶναι—and then he gives the Tacitean story. Possibly the Σινώπιον ὅρος gives the clue to the truth, and the story about Sinope gained credence through Greek influence at the Ptolemaic Court.

The length at which Tacitus dwells on the story is due perhaps to the vogue which Egyptian worships had obtained at Rome.

2. Ptolemaeo, Soter, the founder of the dynasty of the Lagidae (306 B.C.).

15. Eumolpidarum, the Attic family in whom was vested the priesthood of the Eleusinian Demeter.

19. Sinopen (Sinub), the oldest colony of Miletus on the south coast of the Euxine: in its later days the residence of the kings of Pontus.

20. Iovis Ditis, Διὸς Χθονίου: one of the numerous cases where an old local cult had been appropriated by the later 'Olympian' religion.

22. regum: rex and regius conveying to a Roman mind rather the idea of an 'Oriental despotism' than a 'constitutional' monarchy.

24. quam religionum for potius quam rel.: cp. 76.

30. sors, 'the answer': a poetical and post-classical use.

31. patris: either we should read patrui, or the Pythian priestess is mistaken as to the relationship.

LXXXIV.

2, 3. diversus animi: Orelli after M, versus animi.

3. numen pavescere: cp. iii. 56, vulnus pavens.

9. deo, either the god of Sinope, or the Pythian Apollo: the dative in the first case is 'ethic,' in the second that of the agent.

13. aversari, with accusative as i. 38, adoptionem aversantes: here it means 'to be displeased with.'

18. pro magnitudine urbis: according to Dionys. Periegetes i.c. the temple was χρυσῷ τιμῆντι κεκοσμένον 'οὐκ ἂν ἐκείνου Νῆδον ἐν ἀνθρώποισι θεώτερον ἄλλον ἴδοιο.

18. loco: notice the Tacitean use of the local ablative without an attribute.

19. Rhacotis: the quarter of Alexandria nearest to the docks.

22. Ptolemaeo, Pt. Euergetes.

22. Seleucia Suriae, on the coast, a little to the west of Antioch.

24. column Heräus interprets here and ii. 28 as the 'crowning ornament': others translate it 'support.' The word is an architectural term: Vitruv. iv. 2, sub tectis si maiora spatia sunt column ponitur in summo fastigio culminis: from which it is obvious that it may be used either in the sense of 'support' or 'summit.'

27. Iovem: note the readiness of the Romans to identify foreign deities with their own. Ditem, i.e. Serapis.

insignibus: 'insignia autem Serapidis Cerberus et draco ad latera, modius in capite, latum pallium, quo ut Pluto involutus est' (Orelli).

29. per ambages seems to mean 'by some far-fetched interpretation,' possibly allegorical.

---

LXXXV.

1. Dom. Mucianusque: v. 68.

13. interventurum, 'interfere with.'

16. Luguduni: Domitian was thus not taking the direct route (over the Great St. Bernard, and down the Rhine) to the seat of war.

18. non defuturus. Josephus asserts, with the flattery of a courtier, that it was the rumour of Domitian's approach which induced the barbarians to surrender at discretion (Bell. Jud. 7. 4). In a similar spirit of adulation Silius Italicus can write—At tu transcendes, Germanice, facta tuorum, Iam puer auricomo praeformidat Batavo (iii. 607).

LXXXVI.

1. Intellegebantur, etc. The meaning seems to be: Dom. saw through Mucianus' plots: but so skilful was Muc. in his obsequiousness that the prince could get no handle for exposing and thwarting them. Heräus and Wolff apparently suppose the obsequium to be Domitian's (D. was obsequious enough to pretend that he was deceived): but obsequium on the part of a prince towards his ministers seems unnatural.

5. traditurus foret = tr. esset: a substitution which shows how completely the future sense of forem had been lost. Livy too has futurum foret (xxii. 57) and similar instances.

8. temperamento, sc. he tempered, checked his desires: but Wolff apparently takes it in the sense of 'disposition,' making it an attribute of Cerialis.

9. elusit, 'parried his proposal.'

12, 13. in altitudinem conditus, 'shrouding himself in a profound reserve.' Suetonius (Dom. 2) says simulavit et ipse mire modestiam imprimisque poeticae studium tam insuetum antea sibi quam postea spretum et abjectum. Quintilian's more favourable judgment carries the less weight as it was wrung from him ab infausta necessitate, as Orelli says: Germanicum Augustum ab institutis studiis deflexit cura terrarum, parumque dis visum est, esse cum maximum poetarum. Quid tamen sublimius, doctius, etc. (x. 1). The same sort of flattery is to be found in Martial, Sil. Italicus, and the elder Pliny.

16. contra interpretabatur, 'put on it an entirely different construction': so practically 'misunderstood.'

18. occupandi, etc. : to be beforehand in gaining the emperor's favour while he was still unbiassed. Cp. i. 56, occupari nutantem fortunam.

21. decernere, used absolutely, in the sense of 'to fight': cp. Liv. iii. 62.

haud procul Hierosolymis: Josephus, 5. 2, gives the exact spot: στρατοπεδεύεται κατὰ τὸν ὑπὸ Ἰουδαίων πατρίως Ἀκανθῶν αὐλῶνα καλούμενον, πρὸς τινὶ κόμῃ Γαβαθσαούλῃ λεγομένη ... διέχων ἀπὸ τῶν Ἱεροσολύμων ὅσον ἀπὸ τριάκοντα σταδίων.

II.

Tacitus' sketch of Jewish history is only interesting as representing that 'anti-Semitism' from which Europe, especially Latin Europe, has never entirely freed itself. Partly it is derived from sources entirely unknown to us: partly based on non-Jewish and often obviously untrustworthy authorities. The historian has nowhere made use of either Josephus or the LXX. As to Josephus, it is possible that his writings were not yet accessible: but it is not easy to see why so careful an author as Tacitus should have entirely omitted to consult the LXX., in spite of the difficulties it would present to him. We can scarcely satisfy ourselves with Duebner's explanation, Tacitus in partem venisse videtur eius contemptus, quo populus terrarum dominus afficiebat Judaeos, neque cognitos habuisse aut voluisse noscere illos libros ex quibus solis vera peti poterant.

4. Creta. This story is not found anywhere except in Tacitus. It is possible to explain its origin in several ways: 1, by the similarity between Idaei and Judaei: 2, by the fact that the Jewish Sabbath was identical with the Saturni dies, and Crete was the home of the worship of Saturn. It is possible also that traditions may have existed of a Phoenician migration from Crete into Africa, dimly recalling the foundation of Carthage and the great Phoenician cities of the coast: and that the Jews may have been confused with their Phoenician neighbours. Cretans (?) are mentioned in connection with Philistines, 2 Samuel, viii. 18.

The legend of Cronos' expulsion by Zeus seems to point to the superseding of an old by a new religion: it may be supposed that Crete was the scene of an exceptionally violent collision between the rival cults. Tacitus is the only author who represents the Idaei as part of the population of Crete : elsewhere they are δαίμονες, or genii—cp. Plut. de facie in orbe Lunae, 26, 12—and legends in general speak of them as attendants of Zeus, not Cronos.

novissima Libyae : cp. A. ii. 24, novissimum ac sine tetrīs mare : Ov. Trist. 3. 13. 27, pars novissima terrarum.

8, 9. aucto in barb. cognomento, 'the name being lengthened into a foreign word.'

10. regnante Iside : Plut. also (de Iside et Os. 31) connects the Jewish migration with Isis. The two leaders here mentioned are of course simply eponymous heroes, born of the names Hierosolyma and Iudaei.

12. exoneratam, sc. the superfluous population was got rid of by being transferred : cp. Liv. xxiv. 29, ad multitudinem inconditam exonerandam.

13. rege Cepheo, father of Andromeda, whose story is generally localized at the Phoenician town of Joppa : Pliny (ix. 15), as well as Tacitus, confuses Jews and Phoenicians, speaking of oppidum Iudaeae Ioppe.

14. Assyrios convenas : a story which seems to have some connection with the Scriptural traditions of the migration of Abraham. Justin (36. 2) places the origin of the Jews in Damascus, a city ruled by Assyrian kings : nomen urbi a Damasco rege inditum ... Post Damascum Azelus, mox Adores et Abraham et Israhel reges fuere. Convenas seems to mean 'immigrants.'

17. clara alii Iud. initia : 'illustrious' because referred to by Homer. Il. 6. 184, Σολύμοισι μαχήσατο κυδαλμοισιν. Od. 5. 282, τήλοθεν ἐκ Σολύμων ὁρέων ἴδεν.

The connection of the Jews with the Solymi (generally represented as settled in Lycia) is of course altogether fanciful, and to be traced to the name Hierosolyma, on the supposition that this meant ιερόν Σολύμων. This Greek equivalent for the name of the holy city is found in the Apocrypha : generally the LXX. word is Ἱερουσαλήμ. Juvenal, vi. 544, speaks of leges Solymae, i.e. Jewish.

III.

1. plurimi auctores. Tacitus' version of the Exodus appears to be based mainly on the narrative of Lysimachus Alexandrinus, a writer of the second century B.C., whose relation is preserved by Josephus (c. Apion. 1. 34) : and the story coincides at different points with that given by Manetho (ap. Josephum et Theophilum), Chaeremon (ap. Josephum), Diodorus, Strabo, Trogus Pompeius, and Justin.

There is a chronological difficulty as to Bocchoris: the only known king of that name reigned 763-720 B.C., while the date of the Jewish migration is generally placed about 1500 B.C. or earlier.

2. tabe, according to Justin, 36. 2, leprosy: scabies et vitiligo.

3. Hammonis oraculo, according to Heräus situated in the modern oasis of Siwah, S.E. of the tableland of Barka.

7. vastis locis: cp. Justin, 36. 2.

8, 9. ne quam deorum, etc. As the text stands, Moses' advice seems to be: Deserted as you are by gods and men alike, trust only to yourselves, as you have a heaven-sent guide in whatever shall relieve you from your present misery: the dux caelestis will thus be represented by the herd of wild asses. pepuliscent would in the oratio recta be pepuleritis: duce caelesti is an ablative absolute. Tacitus' narrative seems to indicate a change from polytheism to monotheism: the Jews are to forget their old gods and trust to the one Deity, who will make his presence known by some saving sign.

This is the sense if we read duce with M; but other MSS. have duci, which would be in apposition with sibimet and refer to Moses himself. This latter reading gives the best sense, but the ablative has better MS. authority. Wolff after Andersen reads ducem caelestem: Ritter conjectures sed sibimet duces caeleste id crederent.

13. inopia aquae: cp. Exodus, 15-23.

16. conjectura herbidi soli, i.e. inferring the presence of water from the grassy nature of the ground.

18. sex dierum iter: cp. Justin, l.c.

19, 20. urbs et templum dicata, zeugma: for urbs condita et templum dicatum.

---

IV.

2. contrarios ceteris mortalibus = contrarios ceterorum mortalium ritibus.

4. quae nobis incesta: e.g. marriage between an uncle and niece.

4. animalis, the wild ass. This introduction of the ass into Jewish tradition and worship may possibly have arisen from a confusion of Israelitish migration with the Egyptian legend of the seven days' flight of Typhon on an ass: Plutarch indeed distinctly says that the myth of Typhon is by some interwoven with the beginnings of Jewish history, but that it is a mere confusion (De Iside et Osiride, 31). According to Diodorus, Antiochus Epiphanes saw in the Temple at Jerusalem a figure of a man riding on an ass, and supposed it to represent Moses.

6. caeso ariete = et arietem caedunt. Egyptian art represented Ammon as a horned deity. For these sacrifices cp. Leviticus, xvi. 3. From this point to the end of the chapter Tacitus is right in his facts: but his explanations are wrong.

8. memoria cladis: M has merito cladis.

10. crebris ieiuniis: Moses instituted only one yearly fast, on the great day of expiation, the tenth day of the seventh month: but many others were afterwards introduced. The Pharisees 'fasted twice in the week.'

11. raptarum frugum argumentum: for the right reason for this v. Deuteronomy, xvi. 3.

12, 13. septimo die otium: Tacitus is confusing the ordinary Sabbath with the seven days' Feast of Tabernacles, which did commemorate the desert sojourn.

14. septimum annum: on the Jewish sabbatical year, v. Leviticus, xxv. 4.

17. Saturno: the Greeks and Romans had adopted the Egyptian custom of naming days after the planets, and the day of Saturn corresponded to the Jewish Sabbath.

20. feratur probably means 'moves,' and is not equivalent to credatur, which latter word would be out of place in connection with so well known a fact as that implied in altissimo orbe.

21, 22. septenos per numeros compleant. M has septimos per numeros commearent: Orelli following most mss. reads septimos per numeros commeare (Meiser commeent). Other suggestions have been conficiant and coniciant, and viam for vim.

The late Mr. J. H. Onions doubted the genuineness of the whole clause (Journal of Philology, 1889). "Commeare can hardly be right, as it is beyond all doubt that celestial bodies do move in multiples of seven, and Tacitus would not be likely to mention this as a mere theory introduced by ferunt. In fact the whole of the last clause from ac to compleant seems out of place here, as it gives the reason why it is the seventh day which is kept holy, not why the compliment is paid to Saturn in particular. Is it not probable that the whole of the clause is a marginal gloss on the previous sentence, septimo die otium placuisse ferunt quia is finem laborum tulcrit, which has been introduced into the text in the wrong place?"

V.

3. pessimus quisque, etc. All Jews, proselytes and others, sent or brought annual contributions to the Temple: and the Jews settled outside Palestine in the time of Tacitus are reckoned at four millions. Josephus says (Antiq. Jud. vii. 2): "Let no one wonder at the wealth of our temple, seeing that all the Jews in the world had long been contributing to it." Cic. pro Flacco, 28, cum aurum Iudaeorum nomine quotannis ex Italia et ex omnibus provinciis Hierosolyma asportari soleret, Flaccus sanxit edicto, ne ex Asia exportari liceret.

5. et quia: sc. et auctae etiam propterea quia.

7. hostile odium: an accusation brought also against the Christians: cp. A. xv. 44. The Mosaic law inculcated the very reverse of this 'hostile odium': but the charge was no doubt partially justified by Jewish exclusiveness. Cp. such passages as John xviii. 28: "They themselves entered not into the judgment hall lest they should be defiled." Philostratus, Apollonius of Tyana, v. 11: "The Jews are farther from us than the natives of Susa or Bactria or India." Diodorus, xxxiv. 1: "They consider all men their enemies."

9. inter se: one would rather expect inter ipsos.

10, 11. transgressi: οι μεταστάντες: a not very common use of the participle: cp. A. ii. 69 missi a Pisone incusabantur.

On the proselytising zeal of the Pharisees, v. Matth. xxiii. 15.

12. inbuuntur, equivalent to discunt, hence used with the infinitive.

contemnere deos: cp. Plin. N.H. xiii. 4: gens contumelia numinum insignis. The Romans easily assimilated other polytheistic religions: but they could not understand Jewish monotheism.

15. ex agnatis. Agnatus has not here its common sense in Roman law of a relative on the father's side: it means a child born in addition, beyond the number specified in the father's will : super numerum patri vel gratum vel destinatum sive post testamentum factum sive ex secundo matrimonio ' (Heraeus) : Greek, ἐπίγονος. Cic. de Or. i. 57, constat agnascendo rumpi testamentum. Cp. Germ. 19, numerum liberorum finire aut quemquam ex agnatis necare flagitium habetur. Precautions against the birth or survival of such children were not a 'flagitium' in Roman eyes.

16. suppliciis peremptorum : provided they be martyrs for their country or religion.

17. condere, etc. Condere of course goes with e more Aegyptio : eademque cura means that the Jews treat the dead in the same way : not strictly true, as the Jewish custom was not to 'mummify' the body, but to anoint it with spices. Cp. St. John, xix. 40, ἔλαβον οὖν τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ καὶ ἐθήσαν αὐτὸ ὀθονίοις μετὰ τῶν ἀρωμάτων, καθὼς ἔθος ἐστὶ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις ἐνταφιάζειν. Heraeus reads, condere quam cremare e more Aegyptio cura, eademque est de infernis, etc. The sense is very much the same. Burning of dead bodies was not recognised by Mosaic law. Under the kings it was customary, but appears never to have been practised after the Babylonian captivity. (Another reading is condire.)

19. caelestium : a variation of construction, for de caelestibus.

21. mente sola : Tacitus at least gives no evidence of holding the common belief that the Jews worshipped the sky : Juv. xiv. 97 says, nil praeter nubes et caeli numen adorant. Strabo, xvi. 2, expresses much the same idea. Cp. Germ. ix. deorumque nominibus appellant secretum illud quod sola reverentia vident (speaking of the Germans).

profanos means here 'profane' or 'impious' : the commoner word would be 'nefarios.'

28. vitis aurea, mentioned by Josephus (Bell. Jud. 5. 5), as having βότρυες ἀνδρομήκευς : also Antiq. Jud. 15. 11.

29. Liberum : this extraordinary fancy is supported by Plutarch (Sympos. 4, 6).

32. absurdus sordidusque, 'uncouth and mean.'

---

VI.

2, 3. ab occasu Phoenices : west, not of Judaea proper, but of Galilee, which Tacitus includes under the name Judaea.

4. Suriae, Coelesyria properly speaking, between Lebanon and Antilebanon. 'Septentrionem,' etc., would naturally mean that from the frontier that touches Syria there is an extensive view to the northward; but Orelli apparently supposes the point of view to be Jerusalem, which "looks far to the north in the direction of Syria," i.e. is separated from Syria by a wide extent of territory to the north. This does not seem probable. Burnouf translates le septentrion apparaît dans le lointain du côté de la Syrie.

Most likely Tacitus is thinking of the general elevation of the whole country, and more especially of the far view to the north from the high range of Lebanon: "from a mountain sanctuary, as it were, Israel looked over the world" (Stanley).

salubria: this and uber solum would refer more especially to Galilee. Judaea itself was far less fertile, although 'a land of milk and honey' in contrast with the surrounding deserts. No doubt the destruction of the woods has caused the country to be even more exposed than in ancient times to the evils of drought.

6. nostrum ad morem: the same as the products of Italy.

balsamum et palmae, especially in the neighbourhood of Jericho, and also in other parts of the valley of the Jordan: according to Josephus, balsam was said to have been introduced into Judaea by the Queen of Sheba. Justin, 36. 3, says opes genti ex vectigalibus opobalsami crevere, quod in his tantum regionibus gignitur. Cp. Hor. Epp. ii. 2. 184, Herodis palmeta. There are scarcely any palms now in Palestine.

9. pavent, 'shrink': Plin. N. H. 12. 25 (the locus classicus on the balsam) personifies the shrub in the same way: ferro laedi vitalia odit. The sap of the balsam was myrrh.

11. in usu medentium: cp. Plin. l.c.

Libanum: Tacitus is apparently speaking of the peak of Hermon, the southern summit of Antilebanon, nearly 9,000 feet high: "a long ascent of snow" (Stanley).

12. erigit, sc. terra. The descriptive phrases in this chapter are poetical throughout: pavent venae, fidum nivibus.

15. unum atque alterum lacum; first the lake of Merom, then the lake of Gennesareth.

integer, i.e. with an undiminished body of water. The Jordan, after emerging from the Lake of Gennesareth, descends rapidly through a fall of 1,000 feet, traversing a deep valley (El Ghor), till it reaches the Dead Sea. Van de Velde compares its winding course between the hills to "a monster serpent chained in the yawning gulf."

16. lacus immenso ambitu: about 40 miles long by 9 broad: 1,300 feet below the level of the sea.

17. sapores corruptior: "the saline particles in the water of the ocean are 4 per cent., that of the Dead Sea contains 26½ per cent." (Stanley, who further says: "The excessive saltiness is, it is believed, mainly occasioned by the huge barrier of fossil salt at its S.W. corner, and heightened by the rapid evaporation of the fresh water poured into it.") Even the water of the Dead Sea is said to be less salt than that of Lakes Elton and Urumia in Central Asia.

accolis pestifer: a myth.

19. inertes undae. Orelli read incertae (M, incertes). This would mean according to him, 'waves of which it is hard to say whether they are really water or not.' According to Heraeus, the adjective is simply an epitheton ornans. On the whole, Orelli's meaning is preferable, though neither are satisfactory. On the buoyancy of the water, cp. Kinglake's description of his own experience (in Eothen, ch. xiii.). According to Josephus, Vespasian caused men to be thrown into the water, bound hand and foot, yet they did not sink.

21. certo anni: considering the occurrence of such phrases as medio diei (i. 62), it is unnecessary to add tempore which is written above the line in M, and is manifestly a gloss.

bitumen: the collection of asphalt was and is the solitary industry of the Dead Sea shores. As to its details, the account given by the gnari locorum appears to be correct.

23. sparso = adperso: a substitution unknown to earlier prose.

24, 25. summa navis, 'the deck.' This is understood after onerat below.

29. undantes bitumine moles, 'masses of floating asphalt.' Josephus—whose account of the Dead Sea tallies generally with that given by Tacitus—speaks of blocks of asphalt as big as ταῦροι ἀκεφάλαι, B. J. iv. 8.

VII.

3. arsisse: the reference is of course to the 'cities of the plain,' Sodom and Gomorrah, destroyed by fire according to Genesis, xix.: probably by volcanic agency. On the assumption that the story implies some kind of eruption or earthquake, Dean Stanley is inclined to connect with the destruction of the cities, the formation of the salt mountains adjacent to the Dead Sea: a theory confirmed, as he says, by the story of the pillar of salt (Sinai and Palestine, ch. vii.).

3, 4. specie torridam: the lake lies in a bare, stony valley.

5. sive herba tenuis, etc., i.e. whether in leaf, flower, or fruit: this appears to be the meaning whether we read solita or solida species. Josephus, B. J. iv. 8, gives a similar account of this 'Dead Sea fruit,' and he is confirmed by the evidence of modern travellers.

9. superfusum spiritum, 'the surrounding atmosphere': Cicero also uses spiritus in this way; cp. Cat. i. 15, caeli spiritus; iv. 7, hic communis spiritus.

11. Belus: Tacitus here turns to an altogether different subject, the Belus or Naman, the second river of Palestine, rising in the Galilaean highlands, and flowing into the sea near Ptolemais (Acco). Tacitus' account is practically the same as that given by Pliny (N. H. xxxvi. 26), Strabo and Josephus.

13. modicum: according to Pliny (l.c.) about 500 paces long.

13, 14. eherentibus, dat. of agent: cp. note on i. 11.

VIII.

1. viciis dispergitur. In Galilee, Josephus counted 204 villages and 11 towns on an area of 90-100 square miles. Stanley (Sinai and Palestine, ch. ii.) says: "The countless ruins of Palestine, of whatever date they may be, tell us at a glance, that we must not judge the resources of the ancient land by its present depressed and desolate state. They show us not only that 'Syria might support tenfold its present population, and bring forth tenfold its present produce,' but that it actually did so."

2. Hierosolyma. Roughly speaking, Jerusalem stands on a high tableland, intersected by depressions, and terminating on every side except the north in deep ravines—the valleys of Hinnom and Jehoshaphat. These natural fortifications made attack on three sides almost impossible : to the north-west the city was protected, as Tacitus says, by not one, but several lines of fortification. From the text we should infer three concentric lines of wall. This would be quite a wrong conclusion ; but Tacitus' expression is justified by the fact that an army, in order to make itself master of the entire city, must gain three or even four walls. There were "four distinct towns, each requiring a separate siege" (Milman). Within the first wall lay the suburb of Bezetha. Immediately to the south of this lay Acra (the lower part of the city), the fortified hill of Moriah, crowned by the Temple and Turris Antonia, and Mount Sion (with the regia); each quarter surrounded by its own wall.

genti caput; Jerusalem was the Jewish, but Caesarea the Roman, capital, the seat of the procurator : whence Tacitus calls the latter place Judaeae caput (ii. 78).

3, 4. dein regia : Mercier's correction of the reading in M, deingia.

4, 5. ad fores tantum; cp. St. Luke, i. 9, 10; Jos. B. J. v. 5, περίεστεφε τὸν τε ναὸν καὶ τὸν βωμὸν ἐθλιθόν τε καὶ χαλεπὴν γείσιον ὅσον πηχναῖον ὕψος, ὃ διείργεν ἐξωτέρῳ τὸν δῆμον ἀπὸ τῶν ἱερῶν.

6. arcebantur, the past tense, because Tacitus writes after the destruction of the Temple.

The narrative changes its subject, without however beginning a fresh sentence.

6, 7. Assyrios penes Medosque : v. note on ii. 78.

8. Macedones, the Seleucid dynasty in Syria.

9. Antiochus, Antiochus IV., Epiphanes: called by the Jews Epimanes, 'the madman': he reigned 176-164 B.C. His consistent persecution of the Jews aroused the resistance of the heroic Maccabaeans or Hasmonean family, with whom Antiochus waged an unsuccessful war. Tacitus pays but scanty tribute to the Jewish patriots' magnificent struggle against the persecutor of their religion and profaner of their temple; as usual his sympathies are with any enemy of the hated race.

The mention of Arsaces' revolt is a chronological mistake, the revolt in question being contemporaneous with the reign of Antiochus II., called Θεός (who reigned 260-245 B.C.). The confusion is not unnatural, as Antiochus Epiphanes appears also to have been entitled Θεός, though not as a standing designation.

14. reges: according to Josephus, Aristobulus was the first of the Maccabeans who assumed the title of king (107 B.C.).

15. expulsi: it seems most natural to explain this as a reference to the six years' civil war between Alex. Jannæus and the Pharisaic party, which led to Alexander's temporary dethronement in 86 B.C. (Milman, History of the Jews, ii. 78). But it may also refer to the contest, sixteen years later, between Hyrcanus and Aristobulus II.

17. fratrum, etc. Even the crimes of Nero scarcely match those which stain the domestic history of the Jewish kings: witness the palace annals of the reign of Herod the Great. Speaking of his later years, Milman says: "It might have seemed that the spirit of the injured Mariamne hovered over the devoted house, and involving the innocent as well as the guilty in the common ruin, designated the dwelling of her murderous husband as the perpetual scene of misery and bloodshed."

IX.

1. Pompeius: he had been invited to decide between the rival candidates for the throne, Hyrcanus and Aristobulus, and entered Jerusalem 63 B.C. The Jewish kingdom was temporarily abolished, Hyrcanus being installed as 'ethnarch' and high priest. v. Milman, ii. 82 seqq.

7. rex Parthorum, 'prince,' as in ii. 25. Pacorus was sent by his father, Orodes, across the Euphrates in command of an army, in fulfilment of a compact with the republican Labienus, an agent of Brutus and Cassius (40 B.C.). Antigonus, the last of the Maccabees, made use of the Parthian alliance to set himself on the Jewish throne; but he and his allies were defeated in 38 and 37 by Antonius' lieutenants, Sosius and Ventidius. Antigonus was beheaded at Antiochia.

10. Herodi, called 'the Great': on his eventful career, v. Milman. His father, Antipater, an Idumæan noble, was the minister of the Jewish ethnarch, Hyrcanus. During Antipater's lifetime, Herod had been governor of Galilee: after his father's death Antonius made him tetrarch of that province. Banished by the Maccabean, Antigonus, he betook himself to Rome; the Caesarians, whose cause he espoused, raised him to the throne of Judæa. He married Mariamne, the niece of Antigonus, and thus strengthened his claim to the inheritance of the Hasmoneans. He was an able but unscrupulous ruler: of his private life it is enough to say, that he put to death seven Hasmoneans and six members of his own family.

11. nihil expectato Caesare, 'without waiting for the decision of Augustus,' who undertook to decide between the rivals who contended for the throne after Herod's death (B.C. 3). By the imperial arbitration Herod's kingdom was divided between three of his thirteen children: Archelaus received Judaea, Idumaea, and Samaria; his brother Herod Antipas, Galilee and Peraea; his stepbrother Philip, the territory east of the Jordan—Gaulonitis, Batanaea, Trachonitis, Ituraea, Auranitis. Nine years afterwards, Archelaus was deposed and banished by the Emperor, and Judaea and Samaria became temporarily a Roman province, governed by an imperial procurator.

Simo established himself at the head of a band of robbers in the glen between Jerusalem and Jericho, and called himself king of Israel. The propraetor of Syria mentioned here is probably that Varus who lost his army and his life twelve years later in the Teutoburg forest.

16. arma potius sumpserunt: although Caligula's mad presumption had driven the Jews to despair, it does not appear that they actually took up arms. From the more detailed account of Josephus, we learn that Petronius the governor of Syria took upon himself to disobey the imperial command, and to intercede with the emperor; but there can be no doubt that he would only have ruined himself by his generosity, had it not been for the opportune fall of Caligula.

17. defunctis regibus. Archelaus had died in exile: v. sup. Herod Agrippa I., a grandson of Herod the Great, and a personal friend of Caligula, not only succeeded to the Trans-Jordanic territories of Philip, but contrived to secure for himself the tetrarchy of Galilee and Peraea, Herod Antipas, his uncle, being driven into exile (Milman, ii. 141, 167, 168). In 41 A.D. Agrippa was allowed to add to his kingdom the districts of Judaea and Samaria, which had for more than thirty years been a Roman province (Milman, ii. 192). But he did not long enjoy his elevation: in 44 as he was presiding at a great festival, "the angel of the Lord smote him, because he gave not God the glory: and he was eaten of worms, and gave up the ghost" (Acts xii.). He left a young son who succeeded only to his uncle's territory of Chalcis: this he was afterwards allowed to exchange for the lands east of the Jordan. Judaea, Galilee, Samaria, and Peraea became for the future a Roman province.

20. Ant. Felix, procurator, 52-60 : the Felix before whom Paul preached. He was brother to Claudius' freedman and favourite Pallas (on whom v. Mayor's note on Juv. i. 109), and took his name from the fact of being a freedman of Claudius' mother, Antonia.

21. Drusilla, second daughter of Agrippa, who married Cyprus, a daughter of Antony and Cleopatra.

23, 24. Claudius nepos : being the son of Drusus and Antonia, daughter of Antony, by his first wife Octavia.

---

X.

2. G. Florum, a Greek of Clazomenae, married to Cleopatra, a friend of Nero's mistress, Poppaea : procurator of Judaea 64-66 : v. Milman, ii. 214. The war broke out in the autumn of 66.

3. C. Gallum : Milman, ii. 241 foll. In a disastrous retreat through the pass of Bethhoron he lost all his military engines and nearly 6,000 men : "the Roman arms had not received so disgraceful an affront, nor suffered so great loss since the defeat of Varus in the forests of Germany" (Milman).

5. taedio, sc. vitalis : by committing suicide : as opposed to fato, a natural death. Cestius was recalled, and superseded by Mucianus, Vespasian being entrusted with the conduct of the Jewish war.

7. ministris, 'subordinates,' as in iv. 19.

duas aestates, 67 and 68.

7, 8. cuncta camporum : cp. A. iii. 35, cuncta curarum. The genitive is not partitive as in opaca locorum, etc. : it is either a gen. of definition, or formed by false analogy from the common partitive usage.

9. proximus annus, 69.

10. quantum ad : cp. the same expression, Agr. 44, Germ. 21.

13. omnes, such as Jotapata, Gamala, Gischala. But several fortresses were not taken till after the fall of Jerusalem. It was a war rather of sieges than battles.

14. eventus, here 'success,' opposed to casus : cp. the same sense in Agr. 22, damna eventibus pensare.

XI.

3. legiones, according to ch. i. the 3rd, 5th, 10th, 12th, 15th, 22nd.

5. longius ausuri exactly translates 'to venture further': but one would expect longius progredi ausuri.

6. cohortibus, sc. auxiliaries.

6, 7. ambigue: in fact Titus was once cut off from the main body of his army: Jos. B. J. v. 2.

8. proelia serebant, a phrase formed apparently on the analogy of manus conserere.

11. famem hostium opperiri: cp. terga hostium promittens, a similar substitution of subst. for verb, 18.

12. virtute, 'deliberate valour,' distinguished from ferocia, ardour or high spirit.

14. morari is best taken transitively (Hierosolyma morarium videbantur): although Orelli says it is for nimis diu ei deesse.

15. moles, massive walls. Blocks of stone, 20 feet long by 4 high, are still to be seen here and there.

16. duos colles: according to Orelli these hills are Acra and Zion. But the elevation of Acra was far lower than that of Mount Moriah, immediately south of it; and in fact Tacitus is evidently describing Acra and Zion at the end of the chapter, when he speaks of alia intus moenia regiae circumiecta. According to Heräus the hills are Acra and Bezetha: but against this the same objection holds good—that relatively to Mount Moriah and Mount Zion, the two other quarters of the town were not in immensum edita.

Probably duos colles is a general description of the city, divided as it is into two main heights, Zion and Moriah. The muri will then be the line of wall surrounding all the city: after this general sketch of the coup d'oeil, the historian described the fortifications lying behind the outer line—the alia moenia and the Temple.

18. obliqui, etc., "with projecting or retreating angles," so that the flanks of attacking parties would be exposed to the besieged. Cp. Veget. iv. 2, si quis ad murum tali ordinatione constructum vel scalas vel machinas voluerit admovere, non solum a fronte sed etiam a lateribus et prope a tergo in sinum conclusus opprimitur.

24. turris: on which v. Milman, iii. p. 17. There were altogether 164 towers on the walls.

Antonia : a fort originally called Baris, standing at the north-west corner of the Temple plateau on a rock 90 feet high : restored and strengthened by Herod I., it served for some time as quarters for the Roman garrison. For a description of it v. Milman, iii. 19.

---

XII.

1. Templum, on Mount Moriah, the eastern height of the city. For a detailed description v. Milman, iii. 20.

2. porticus, the double (on one side triple) portico or cloister surrounding the Temple court. The whole of the Temple buildings covered a square of a furlong's length each side.

4. fons ; the spring called Siloam or Siloe, which fed the "pool of Siloam" (cp. S. John, ix. 7), and also the "upper pool" (which Jos. B. J. v. 4, calls Σολομῶνος κολυμβήθρα). According to Jerome the spring was not perennis but intermittent.

11. magna conluyies : that is, the population consisted not only of the ordinary inhabitants, but of numbers of Jews from all quarters : such as the so-called Sicarii of Simon, and the Galilean zealots under John of Gischala. Among the cities whose fall contributed to swell the population of Jerusalem were Jotapata, Gamala, Gischala, Lydda.

12. aucti is grammatically in apposition with the subj. of struxere, but of course refers to a quite different point of time : we should translate "and their numbers were now increased," etc. conluyies is easier to understand than to translate : the sense is, that the Jews had been swept together like rubbish. Cp. A. ii. 15, where the Athenians are called a conluyies nationum, a population made up of the sweepings of the earth.

14. extrema, etc. : sc. the wall of Agrippa, surrounding the whole city, including the quarters Acra and Bezetha.

Simo (v. Milman, ii. 357), a native of Gerasa, east of the Jordan, and leader of a robber army, who had for some time waged war as much against the Galilean zealots of Jerusalem as against the Roman invader. Eventually faction in the city caused him to be admitted within its walls.

Simon is called by Josephus 'son of Gioras,' so that the words quem et Bargioram vocabant must be a mistake : perhaps they should either be placed after 'Simo' or omitted altogether as a mistaken gloss: Bargioras = bar Giora, Giorae filius. John was the son of Levi. Simon survived the destruction of Jerusalem, and was brought to Rome to grace Titus' triumph, as the bravest of the Jewish leaders, after which he was put to death.

15. Ioannes : he had taken refuge in Jerusalem after the capture of his native town Gischala, and thenceforward headed the party of desperate resistance to the Roman arms. The media urbs which he held was the Tower of Antonia and Mount Moriah, with the exception, so far, of the inner court of the Temple, which was as yet occupied by Eleazar at the head of the original Jewish war party : whereas John relied principally on the support of Galilean refugees.

17. armis : John was in possession of military engines, perhaps those of the routed army of Cestius : v. 10.

20. per speciem sacrificandi, at the feast of the Passover. According to Tacitus, evidently some of the zealots were obtruncati : Josephus does not mention this, simply saying that John sent a force and intimidated the zealots into joining him.

---

XIII.

1. prodigia : Josephus mentions among other prodigies that a cow gave birth to a lamb in the Temple.

Perhaps the strangest story of all is that of one Jesus, son of Ananus. For seven years before the capture of the city this man had cried continually in the streets, "Woe, woe to Jerusalem!" and had only been saved from punishment by the popular opinion that he was a harmless maniac. At last during the siege he suddenly cried, "Woe to myself!" and was that instant struck dead by a stone.

2. fas habet : cp. Leviticus, xix. 26.

3. religionibus adversa : a curious paradox as applied to Jews. Superstitio is sometimes used by Tacitus, as here, to denote any cult other than Roman or Greek : cp. A. xi. 15, externae superstitiones : apparently he has still enough belief in the Roman religion to contrast it with superstition.

3, 4. concurrere acies : "As when to warn proud cities wars appear waged in the troubled sky." Compare the story of the phantom battle seen above Utrecht, in Motley's Dutch Republic, pt. iv. chap. i.

5. apertae fores, which ordinarily could only be moved by twenty men.

6. excedere deos: according to Josephus φωνή ἀπορά 'Μεταβαλόμεν ἐντεῦθεν.' Both Romans and Greeks believed that a doomed city was deserted by its gods: cp. Septem. c. Th. 200, θεοὺς τοὺς τῆς ἀλούσεως πόλεως ἐκλείπειν λόγος. According to ancient custom when the Romans besieged a city, their priests used to evocare deum cuius in tutela id oppidum esset. (Plin. N. H. xxviii. 2.)

8. trahebant = interpretabantur: a common sense of the word in Tacitus.

persuasio inerat: the people in general were persuaded of the advent of the Messiah. Suet. and Jos. agree with Tac. in referring the popular belief to the Flavian dynasty. Cp. Jos. B. J. 55, ἐδήλου δ' ἄρα τὸ λόγιον τὴν Οὐεσπασιάνου ἡγεμονίαν: Suet. Vesp. 4, id de imperatore Romano quantum postea eventu paruit praedictum.

12, 13. sibi ... interpretati, interpreting the great prophecy to their own advantage.

14. ad vera mutabantur, "could be brought to recognise the truth."

15. secus (archaic and post-classical form of 'sexus') is only used by Tac. in the acc. and then adverbially as here. Cp. A. iv. 62.

15, 16. sescenta milia: yet Jos. says that 1,100,000 perished in the siege: B. J. vi. 9. If we are to try to explain the discrepancy, we may suggest that Josephus' number may include those slain in the internal strife immediately preceding the actual siege: but he is rather prone to exaggeration.

19. maior vitae metus: cp. Dio Cass. lxvi. 6, "They considered it victory and safety to perish with the Temple."

21. subita belli, a sudden attack, coup de main.

23. expugnandis urbibus: dative of purpose.

XIV

1. in Treveris: the battle of Trèves described iv. 78.

4. prosperarum illic rerum: illic may be connected with either the substantive or adjective; if with the latter, it is equivalent to prospere illic gestarum, if with the former, we may compare such an attributive use of an adverb as ii. 16, Liburnicarum ibi navium.

6. duplicatis: he had already five legions, but some of them were incomplete, so that the addition of three entire legions might well double his force.

7. legionum: for the plural cp. i. 18, quartam et duotvicensimam legiones.

11. obliquam in Rh. molem, 'a dam projecting into the Rhine.' Orelli says moles is ex lapidibus trabibusque congesta, 'Damm'; contra 'agger,' 'Deich,' ex humo dumtaxat congestus.

obiectum, a common word in Tacitus: cp. iii. 9, obiectum paludis: and Virg. Aen. i. 59, obiectum laterum.

revolutus, a strong word meaning simply 'checked.'

14. nandi pavidus: cp. A. xiv. 38, offensionum non pavidus.

15. levitas armorum: cp. A. ii. 14, non lorica Germano, non galeam, ne scuta quidem ferro nervove firmata.

XV.

6, 7. cominus certabatur: M has cominus minus; whence Orelli cominus minus. (Meiser comminus.)

12. egredi paludem: cp. egredi moenia, iii. 76.

castra, Vetera.

15. instare ... abolere, descriptive infinitives: 'Civilis' aim was to follow up his success,' etc.

17. nox apud barbaros, etc. There is a threefold variation of construction: apud with accusative corresponds to the dative; the ablative to per with accusative; aut to et.

XVI.

4. cuneis: cp. iv. 16, note.

5. Cugerni: cp. iv. 26.

8, 9. ut quosque suorum advehebantur: cp. A. ii. 45, ut quosque advectus erat. The plural is used because it was of course not individuals who were addressed, but separate portions of the armies.

10. victorias, sc. memorabat: it is easily understood.

11, 12. excinderent: M has exciderent; but excindere occurs tolerably often in Tacitus, e.g. A. ii. 25; and in Virg. Aen. iv. 137, sceleratam excindere gentem.

14. quod roboris fuerit : cp. iv. 76.
 16. domitores Britanniae : cp. i. 59.
 17, 18. sextae legionis : the sixth legion (Victrix), quartered in Spain, had elected Galba emperor.
 19. nova signa : they were e recens conscriptis : iv. 68.
 20. praevectus, 'riding past' (sc. aciem legionum).

XVII.

1. silens instruxit makes rather better sense than the MS. reading silentem struxit, though the latter might be perhaps justified by the alacrior omnium clamor, on the Roman side, of ch. 16.
 2. ciens, 'appealing to.'
 5. dira omnia, sc. nihil nisi dira : cp. the frequent phrase laeta omnia, e.g. A. i. 42.
 7, 8. dum ... impediunt : cp. iii. 38, note.
 10. providisse : the reading of M is preuisse : other MSS. have providisse. Orelli provisa.
 14. gloriosissimum inter maiores stands apparently for gloriosissimum inter (sc. compared with) gloriosos maiorum dies.
 16. ita illis mos : cp. Germ. 11, sin placuit sententia frameas concutiunt ; honoratissimum adsensus genus est armis laudare.

---

XVIII.

6. turbata ibi res, 'a panic began.'
 10. terga hostium promittens, i.e. showing that they could thus take the enemy in rear. There is the same brevity in the phrase as in post Cremonam (for post excissam Cremonam) iii. 49.
extremo paludis : cp. such phrases as medio diei. The case may be either dative after immitteretur, or ablative of route taken : like montibus, iv. 77.
 11. illa, 'there' : cp. iii. 8, ne pervium illa foret. A. ii. 17, illa rupturus.
 16. Romana classis, the flotilla regularly stationed in the Rhine : it is mentioned again, 21.

XIX.

2. Annio, governor of Upper Germany: cp. iv. 68.

3. decuma: cp. iv. 68.

4, 5. oppidum Batavorum: this is apparently the reading of M, and it is best to follow it instead of the other reading, oppida, as there may have been towns also in the insula. At the same time the "town of the Batavians" is not elsewhere mentioned, and its introduction is abrupt. Where it was is not known: some identify it with Cleves: clearly the present passage points to some place on the left bank of the Waal.

9. moles: a work begun by Drusus 9 B.C., and completed by Pompeius Paulinus, governor of Lower Germany, A.D. 55. The object of its constructors was to strengthen the Roman frontier by increasing the volume of water in the right or northern channel of the river, after its bifurcation: the dam diverted into this northern stream part of the water, which would naturally have flowed in the southern channel, the Waal. Civilis by destroying the "moles" starved the northern, while increasing the southern arm—thus at once strengthening his position against the Romans and facilitating his communications with Germany. On the "moles," v. A. xiii. 53. Drusus made also a canal, connecting the right branch with the Yssel.

10. prono alveo: the natural tendency of the stream was to flow into the Waal.

14. Rhenum, i.e. the Waal.

15. senatores, properly decuriones, the usual term for a local senate.

17. superius, iii. 35.

18. miseratione, 'by arousing sympathy.'

XX.

1. tantum belli superfuit, 'so little was the war at an end.'

3. Arenacum is thought to have been near Cleves: Bata-vodurum near Nymwegen: as to Grinnes and Vada nothing is known.

7. traherent: M has "traheret," but Tacitus regularly uses the plural after quisque when in apposition with a plural number: cp. iv. 65, eos bellum absumpsit, vel in suas quisque sedes refugerunt.

9. adfore, an abrupt transition to oratio obliqua. Cp. iii. 70, culpam in militem conferens, cuius nimio ardori imparem esse modestiam suam.

10. pluribus nuntiis, a causal abl.

13. materiis, wood for building: cp. iv. 23. The forest of Cleves still supplies abundance of wood.

15. primoribus cent. = primi centurionum (ii. 89): the ten pili priores of the front rank. v. Dict. of Antiq. "Exercitus."

17. interrumpere, intrumpere M.

---

XXI.

4. Briganticus: cp. iv. 70.

8. annem, the Waal.

10. Veraci: the usual reading has been "Veracis," corrected from the Germani of M. The dative is more in accordance with Tac.'s custom.

11. transvexere: M, vexere: Her. avexere.

ne tum quidem, 'any more than in the battle of,' ch. 18.

16. artes, 'strategy.' For defuissent cp. i. 10 note.

18. periculum evasisset: evadere with acc. is generally post-Augustan: it is found in Lucilius.

XXII.

2. hiematuris: the campaign had lasted nearly all the year.

6. vallum: Cerialis had encamped for the night on the river bank, apparently in the country of the Ubii, between Novae-sium and Vetera.

10. fallendum, τὸ λαθεῖν: cp. fefellere, ii. 98.

silentio, after which some word like agebant must be supplied in translation: miscabant only suits clamoribus. It is a case of zeugma.

16. vexillo: one may suppose that spies by day had supplied this detail, as the vexillum would scarcely be visible at night. According to Liv. xxix. 25, three lanterns were the distinguishing mark of the "flag-ship."

17. alibi: as also at Trier, iv. 77.

21. signo, the bugle call which marked the beginning of the different vigiliae. The voces are the demand for and giving of the word as the officer goes his rounds.

24. Lupia, the Lippe. The Roman trireme apparently drew only about 3 feet of water; otherwise the story would be incredible.

24. Velaedae: cp. iv. 61.

XXIII.

1. cupido incessit: incedere is often used with accusative in Tacitus. Cp. ii. 2, illum cupido incessit. The reading of M is cupido inuasi incessit: perhaps the scribe began to write invasit. The late Mr. J. H. Onions suggested (Journal of Philology, vol. 16) cupido inanis incessit. Inanis would be well justified by insitam genti vanitatem below.

2. quaeque simplici, etc., 'which were propelled by a single row of oars': Tacitus avoids the proper word moneris (μονήρης) with his usual aversion to technical terms.

4. quadragenosque: followed by ser in M, out of which some make ferentium; Wolff reads vexere (after Meiser), making this and the three preceding words a parenthesis.

5. captae: Heräus and Wolff read actae (i.e. rowed) whereby these boats would be distinguished from the others, which were rigged like 'Liburnicae' (cp. ii. 16.)

sag. versicol.: cp. ii. 20, versicol. sagulo indutus: Aen. viii. 660, (Galli) virgatis lucent sagulis.

6. spatium: the wide expanse of water (nearly six miles broad) at the confluence of the Maas and Lek, the continuation of the eastern Rhine. Tacitus means that the Maas, after joining the Waal, is united by a side stream with the Lek, and that the united streams flow together under the name Mosa into the sea. Pliny, N.H. iv. 15, calls this expanse 'Helinium': perhaps there is a remnant of the name in the modern Hellevoet and Hellevoetsluis.

14. his, the Romans.

15. praevecti, 'passing each other.'

16. trans Rhenum, across the N. or right branch of the river.

18. nota arte: we read of Archidamus, during a Peloponnesian invasion of Attica, employing this 'ars' against Pericles (Thuc. ii. 13), and Hannibal treated Fabius' estates in the same way (Liv. xxii. 23).

19. flexu autumnni, sc. when autumn began to draw to a close: the metaphor is from the turning point or meta in a race-course. Cp. Cic. pro Cael. 75, in hoc flexu quasi aetatis.

21. in faciem stagni, 'so that it resembled a lake.'

XXIV.

2. inputavit, 'made a merit of': v. on i. 38, iii. 86.

9. mutare: cp. monuit firmare, iv. 33.

receptos Ubios: iv. 79.

11. fugas, banishments: cp. 8, fugas civium.

12. satis peccavisse, sc. eos.

13. transcenderint: cp. A. iv. 44, flumen Albim transcendit. Livy uses the word of crossing the sea (xxi. 44.)

---

XXV.

7. bellum navaverint, etc., sc. if it was Vespasian they fought for, their object was already obtained. For the phrase, cp. iv. 59, flagitium navare.

9. vocent=provocent: cp. iv. 80, vocare offensas.

15. atrociora, 'used more violent language.'

16. domesticis malis: cp. iv. 13. For the thought, cp. i. 53, privata vulnera rei publicae malis operire statuit.

18, 19. bellum...sumeretur: a phrase not uncommon in Livy and Tacitus.

XXVI.

3. infringit: the same Stoicism of sentiment appears in Tacitus' condemnation of Maroboduus for nimia vivendi cupiditas (A. ii. 63.)

4. Nabaliae: a river nowhere else mentioned. As Civilis had apparently retreated across the right or northern boundary of the insula, it may perhaps be identified with the Yssel (diverging northwards from the Rhine above Arnheim) or the Vecht, which connects the Rhine, at a point somewhat lower down, with the Zuyder Zee. Some suggest the Lek; but Tacitus would call it Rhenus, probably.

5. abrupta, 'the broken ends.'

7. defenderer, middle: 'were making my defence.'

8. debeatur = deberetur. Cp. Cic. pro lege Manilia 17, si Romae Pompeius privatus esset hoc tempore, tamen ad tantum bellum is erat diligendus.

9. hostilia: cp. iii. 70, antequam invicem hostilia coeptarent.

10. erga Vespasianum: possibly Civilis became acquainted with Vespasian, as Heräus suggests, when the latter was commanding the 2nd legion in the expedition to Britain of 43 A.D.: if this is so, Civilis was no longer young.

12. epistulis: the letter mentioned iv. 13.

16. Flavianus: this is not strictly accurate: cp. ii. 86, iii. 4. What Civilis meant is that he had only fought for the same cause which had been supported by all the Flavian leaders.

So ends the story of the revolt. Apparently the Batavians were not punished by any loss of those rights which they had enjoyed: an honourable peace ended the rebellion. Tacitus says in the Germania (39), 'Manet honos et antiquae societatis insigne: nam nec tributis contemnuntur nec publicanus atterit: exempti oneribus et collationibus ... bellis reservantur.'
